Reds Narrow Nazi Escape Route

Reds Make Fierce Bid OnKharkov

Berlin Press Adopts Almost Frantic Tone by Declaring Enemy Must Be Stopped

Nazis Vanquished

Three Divisions Routed in Lama River Area by Soviet

(By The Associated Press)

Russia's armies, executing a gigantic crack-the-whip movement, were reported to have further narrowed the "escape corridor" of 100,000 German troops at Mozhaisk today and smashed Adolf Hitler's winter defense line at two important points.

The battle for Kharkov, Russia's "Pittsburgh" in the Ukraine, also was reported entering a decisive phase.

Soviet dispatches said Red army troops, supported by hard-riding Don Cossack cavalrymen, had scored gains on both flanks of the Mozhaisk hold-out garrison, 57 miles west of Moscow.

Red Star, the Russian army newspaper, said Mozhaisk was burning and that hand-to-hand fighting was raging in the streets.

Soviet forces stormed across the Lama river 75 miles north of Moscow, sharpening the pressure above Mozhaisk, while other Russian forces intercepted the road to Warsaw 140 miles southwest of Moscow, it was reported.

Front-line dispatches said the Russian winter was now approaching its peak, with temperatures colder than 25 degrees below zero Fahrenheit.

Meanwhile, in tones approaching panic, the Berlin press declared that the "on-rushing enemy must be stopped, no matter when, where or how."

A bulletin from Hitler's field headquarters, tersely reiterating that the Germans were fighting "defensive battle" along the 1,200-mile front from Leningrad to the Ukraine, claimed success only in the Crimean campaign.

The Nazi high command said Russian troops fighting northeast of Peodosiya, which was reported recaptured by the Germans yesterday, had been driven eastward along the Kerch peninsula.

Three German divisions were vanquished in the Lama river crossing, said the government newspaper Izvestia, the Russians thrusting from Volokolamsk through Latoshino.

Reoccupation of Vereya, 13 miles southeast of Mozhaisk, and Kondrovo, in the Vyazma-Bryansk zone to the west, moved closer to German communication lines, the southern arm of the Mozhaisk pincer.

Fighting for Kharkov, industrial metropolis of the Donets basin, was by both London and Berlin reports apparently in a decisive stage. The British radio said the Germans acknowledged the base "is being furiously attacked by Soviet forces from the north and the south."

Reuters, British news agency, estimated Germany had lost 2,000,000 men, killed, severely wounded, missing and prisoners in the Russian campaign.

Evidence that Adolf Hitler was seeking replacements from junior partners in the Axis came from Bern, Switzerland.

Ditpatches from Bern said Hungary had agreed to German-Italian demands for more military assistance in the war against Russia. Hungary, which has sent only a token force east, was reported to have been asked by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop to show "the same loyalty as Rumania." Russian figures indicate Rumania has sent 26 divisions against the Red army and has lost 13 of them.

At Least 13 Die in Fire

Flames Sweep Through Apartment House at Lynn, Massachusetts; Eight Persons Are Missing

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 20 (AP)—Flames swept through a five-story apartment and rooming house here today, sending fire from basement to roof as if it were a huge brick furnace and leaving 13 dead and 21 in hospitals. Firemen worked through smoking embers in search of eight persons still missing.

The fire started in the basement and swept upward so quickly that dozens of tenants, many of them aged and infirm, were trapped on the top floors of the structure, Melvin Hall, in the center of the city.

Firemen found many clinging to high ledges as flames enveloped the building. Others had jumped and lay moaning and screaming on the ground.

"I saw a number of persons come to the windows on the top floor and then fall back," said Police Sergeant William Gillespie.

The fire was one of the most costly in loss of life in the history of Lynn, and one of the worst in New England since the early 1900's.

Early last year 13 firemen were killed in a theatre fire in Brockton, Mass., but today's toll appeared likely to rise far beyond that.

Harry Anderson, janitor of the building, discovered the fire at 1:45 a. m. in a coal bin in the cellar. A half hour later a general alarm was turned in and apparatus was summoned from all nearby cities.

Shortly thereafter, Forrest Alden, 31, told of his escape from the top floor.

"I saw one woman jump from a nearby room," he said. "She seemed to strike the wall of the building, and then was thrown across the space between the rooming

Henderson Says Used Cars Will Not Be Rationed by U. S.

Neither Has Nation Any Idea of Taking Over Private Cars, He Tells Dealers

Chicago, Jan. 20 (AP)—Leon Henderson, federal price administrator, told representatives of 42,000 automobile dealers today "as far as the office of price administration is concerned, there is not now any prospect either of rationing used cars or of commandeering private cars."

His address was read to the National Automobile Dealers Association by Cyrus Mc Cormick, chief of the O.P.A. automobile and truck section, because business kept Henderson in Washington. Convention headquarters said the statement relieved a tension that had disturbed the trade badly.

"I have frequently been asked," Henderson said, "whether we contemplate any need to ration used cars. I have also been asked as to whether there is any immediate prospect of commandeering private cars. Any answer that I might make to either of these questions would only serve to disturb the industry more than it is now disturbed.

"All I can say is that as far as the office of price administration is concerned, there is not now any prospect either of rationing used cars or of commandeering private cars."

Henderson said that in his judgment any need for considering any rationing plan for used cars might be dissipated by a decline in the use of cars due to shortage of tires.

Henderson predicted failure for some automobile dealers, and loss of jobs for many employes, but said he anticipated there would be work in defense production for every unemployed man before long.

In rationing new cars, Henderson declared, the O.P.A. has provided that cars now frozen would pass through the hands of dealers when sold.

O'Connor Resigns As County Deputy For New Position

Charles R. O'Connor, who has served as deputy county clerk of the County of Ulster since 1928, has tendered his resignation to County Clerk Robert A. Snyder and will leave his present position in the near future to become executive vice president of the Homeseekers' Savings and Loan Association of Kingston. A successor to Mr. O'Connor has not been named and he will remain as deputy county clerk until his successor is appointed.

The resignation of Mr. O'Connor as deputy county clerk followed his election Monday evening to the office of executive vice president of the downtown Savings and Loan Association at the annual meeting.

Mr. O'Connor was appointed deputy county clerk by the late Walter G. Geroldsek shortly after Mr. Geroldsek became county clerk and he has served in that capacity since.

At the annual meeting of the Homeseekers' Monday evening it was voted to change the name of the downtown loan association from Homeseekers' Co-operative Savings and Loan Association of the City of Kingston to the Homeseekers' Savings and Loan Association of Kingston, N. Y., thus eliminating the word "co-operative" from the title. This is in line with the policy of many Savings and Loan Associations throughout the country.

At the stock holders meeting directors for three years were named as follows: Samuel H. Peyer, Eugene P. MacConnell, John B. Sterley, Peter J. Hallorman and Wilmer S. Nickerson. All of the above being re-elected to the board.

Tanker Malay Attacked Off Coast; Makes Port

Australians Blast 10 Japanese Tanks In Brief Battle

Small Force Holds Out Against Encirclement Until Help Comes in Malaya

By IAN FITCHETT
(Official Australian Correspondent)

With the Australian forces in Malaya, Jan. 19 (Delayed) (Australian Associated Press to AP)—Tough Australian troops operating in the Muar river area 90 miles above Singapore destroyed 10 Japanese tanks in one brief engagement yesterday and, after being trapped by infiltration movements of the enemy, held out against superior numbers until rescue forces arrived.

The action described as "a triumph for anti-tank gunners," was termed one of the most vital battles of the Malayan campaign.

Seeking to cut off the Australian troops from the main road running into the area, the Japanese effected a coastal landing in some strength and succeeded in getting tanks ashore.

Contact was first made with the invaders by infantry at dusk Saturday and then artillery fire was used to immobilize them until dawn. With the first rays of daylight, enemy tanks were observed coming down the road and anti-tank guns were placed in a position dominating the roadway.

The sergeant in charge of the gun on the right held his fire until the first of the six tanks was only 30 yards away and then shouted: "Pour it into them; right into their bellies."

Bursts Into Flames

The first tank burst into flames following a direct hit and the others, piling up behind it, were knocked off one after the other, being unable to turn and escape the direct line of fire.

It was found impossible to bring a gun to bear on the last of the six so a gunner raced up to it, pitching hand grenades and immobilizing it.

When members of the tank crews who were still alive attempted to leave their flaming vehicles, supporting infantry picked them off, one by one.

Meanwhile, another anti-tank gun destroyed four more tanks which had come up some distance behind the original six, boosting the bag to 10. Artillery then began shelling the road, making it impossible for the Japanese to move up any transports or infantry.

However, enemy troops began filtering through the rubber groves and soon the whole area was infested by snipers lodged in trees. A few hours later it was realized that the anti-tank crews and their supporting infantry were almost surrounded.

About a mile to the rear the Japanese felled two trees, blocking the road and preventing Australian Bren gun carrier reinforcements from advancing.

The siege lasted the greater part of the day, but there was little hand-to-hand fighting, the enemy keeping well out of sight in the rubber groves or sniping from tree tops.

Finally the roar of Bren gun carriers told the besieged troops that reinforcements had forced their way forward to relieve them.

Behind the carriers came fresh infantry, sweeping through the rubber groves and mopping up stray Japanese troops who discovered too late that their plan had backfired.

The artillery was credited with doing marvellous work throughout these operations and was alone responsible for blocking a Japanese flanking attack—the first attack of this nature to have been turned back in this campaign.

Torpedo, Shell Raid Comes Before Dawn Without Warning, Says the Crew

Newport News, Va., Jan. 20 (AP)—Shelled and torpedoed by a lurking Axis submarine off the North Carolina coast where the tanker Allan Jackson was sunk Sunday, the 8,206-ton tanker Malay reached port under her own power late last night with a story of attack without warning in Monday's pre-dawn darkness.

The crash of a shell on the bridge was the first alarm for the crew of 45 aboard the unarmed vessel. Crewmen said the Malay changed her course immediately and sought to turn her stern toward the unseen submarine. Another shell ripped through the port wing of the bridge and three others struck aft.

When the tanker kept afloat the U-boat apparently maneuvered for the kill, but a torpedo which struck amidships failed to deliver a death blow. The submersible withdrew after a two-hour attack.

The Malay, empty and in ballast, was proceeding south. Had she been loaded with oil she might have suffered the same fate as the Allan Jackson, believed to have lost 23 of her crew of 35 in flame-covered waters where she sank.

Adams J. Hay, 45-year-old second cook of the Malay from Burlington, N. Y., was killed by a splinter from a shell which pierced the bulkhead above his bunk and four others lost their lives when a life boat capsized in being launched from the Malay. They were Clifford E. Ashby, 23, fireman, of Port Arthur, Tex.; Manuel Derosa, chief cook, Jersey City; Andrew Anderson, oiler, and William L. Miller, mess boy, for whom no addresses were available.

Boatswain Walter Bruce, of Staunton, Ill., said five or six other ships near the Malay were not attacked. A Swedish ship stood by and put over a boat to ask if assistance were needed.

"I was on the bridge when the shelling began," said Second Mate William Arthur Greene of New London, Conn. "I did not see the submarine, but I did see the wake of the torpedo before it struck."

Others of the crew said they did not see the attacker.

"Nobody was panicky," Bruce said in describing the attack, "but the catwalk did a big business as the men moved toward lifeboats."

To Becloud Enemy

Springtime is showertime—for the new crop of brides. All the old shower-styles go by the board. Aluminum is on priorities—so out goes the kitchen shower. Rubber is on priorities—so out goes the bathroom shower. Wool is on priorities—so out goes the blanket shower. What's left? A Defense Savings Stamp shower—money for the bride and groom to put into a Defense Bond—to cash, with interest, on that tenth anniversary celebration. Yes—it's a 'tin' anniversary—and those bonds will assure 'tin' of being off the priority list by then.

Curtin Asks for Action

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 20 (AP)—Prime Minister John Curtin expressed hope today that China's representations, "added to our own, will result in the British government becoming aware of the intense gravity of the Pacific situation."

Nazis Are Shifted

Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 20 (AP)—German forces in Norway are being withdrawn for service on the Russian front and are being replaced by older men, a dispatch from Stockholm to the Basler Nachrichten declared today.

Activities Continue

Cairo, Jan. 20 (AP)—Britain's Middle East general headquarters said in its communique on the Libyan campaign today merely: "Our mobile columns are continuing their activities east of El Agheila."

No Deaths in Parish

Hays, Kas., Jan. 20 (AP)—The Catherine parish of the Catholic Church in Ellis county didn't have a death in 1941. The Rev. Father Ignatius reported 13 births and 13 marriages among the 700 communicants in the parish.

Russians Say Offensive Continues

The Russians smashed across Lake Ladoga ice against Schluesselburg fortress (1) in an attempt to pinch off the eastern end of the German line at Leningrad; Red tanks drove at the Finns in Karelia; (2) The Russians fought hand-to-hand with the Germans in Mozhaisk and Orel, captured Polotnyany-Zavod, drove to Vereya; (3) Ukrainian troops at Kharkvo met Nazi counter-attack; (4) the Germans claimed Feodosiya but Soviets said Kerch was "cleared."

Broadway Crossing Elimination May Await End of War

Public Service Engineer Says Steel Priorities Delay Advertising; Others Affected

Inability to obtain priorities for the necessary steel needed in construction work may defer the elimination of the Broadway crossing of the West Shore railroad until the close of the present world war, according to information furnished today by Chief Grade Crossing Engineer John A. O'Connor of the State Public Service Commission at Albany.

Mr. O'Connor told The Freeman that inability to obtain priority orders for steel was delaying not only the Kingston project but a number of other crossing projects in other sections of the state.

This inability to obtain the necessary steel needed is the principal reason why there has been no advertising for bids for the construction of the Broadway crossing underpass.

Mr. O'Connor asserted that just how long this situation would continue was not known. He expressed the opinion that with the inability to obtain necessary steel it would not be of any use to advertise the project for construction bids.

Word that the crossing project would not be started this year does not come as an unexpected surprise, as those who have been keeping in close touch with the project realized that much of the

Russian Winter Is Bright Spot for Whole Allied Cause

Spring's Return Will Show How Gigantic Losses of Nazis Have Been in Campaign

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Wide World War Analyst)

The brightest spot for the allies today rests not in feats at arms but in a little one sentence news dispatch brought by the Associated Press from the temporary Soviet capital of Kuibyshev to say that "the Russian winter is approaching its peak period with temperatures of more than 25 degrees below zero Fahrenheit."

In other words the fierce cold which for weeks has been playing havoc in Herr Hitler's ranks is only now really hitting its pace. Note that it hasn't yet reached its peak, and there will be plenty more of it before spring.

The Russians are prepared for this, both in the matter of clothing and of fighting equipment. The Germans haven't even warm clothing to protect them. Not only are large numbers of Nazi troops being frozen to death, but it is said that trains are loaded with men being rushed back for hospital treatment of the terrible frost bite which produces the dread gangrene.

Whatever may be the feeling at seeing an enemy freeze to death, we certainly can't disavow a great ally like a Muscovite winter which is having such a devastating effect

21 American Republics Might Make Complete Break With Axis Powers

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 20 (AP)—A unanimous break in relations with the Axis powers by the 21 American republics within two days was predicted today by a high functionary of the Pan American Conference.

The informant, who declined to be quoted by name, said Argentina's attitude had been "radically modified" after her Foreign Minister, Dr. Enrique Ruiz Guinazu talked yesterday with Brazil's Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha.

There were high hopes that Ruiz Guinazu would abandon his isolationist position completely.

Argentina and Chile have been the lone holdouts, but observers have expressed the belief that Chile would follow the Argentine lead.

Chile drafted a proposal today calling for a conference of the all the American nations, as the Pan American Conference neared its crucial decision on a joint severance of relations with the Axis.

The proposal for a rupture was expected to reach the full defense committee late today, and possibly the plenary session of the conference tomorrow.

As six subcommittees began studying dozens of resolutions submitted earlier, Sumner Welles of the American delegation and Brazilian Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha closeted themselves in the Itamaraty Palace offices of Aranha. Shortly afterward they called the delegates of Venezuela and Colombia, who with Mexico, sponsored the resolution calling for a break.

Argentina and Chile have been the lone holdouts against the break, agreed to by the 19 other American Republics.

U. S. War Department Says 3 Jap Bombers Are Downed in Attack Near Manila

Churchill Talks

Prime Minister Tells Commons Victory in East Certain

By ROGER D. GREENE
(Associated Press War Editor)

Japanese invasion troops, attacking only 60 miles north of Singapore island, were officially reported exerting "heavy pressure on the entire front" in western Malaya today, and a crisis in the defense of Britain's $400,000,000 stronghold was apparently imminent as sea-borne Japanese forces cut in below the main battle line.

In the Philippine war theatre, a war department bulletin reported that six American bombers sank a Japanese cruiser and scored direct hits on a tanker, leaving it in flames 100 miles off Jolo.

The war department said three Japanese bombers were shot down in renewed attacks on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's valiant American-Filipino defense forces battling on Batan peninsula, northwest of Manila.

The communique also disclosed the first word in days that American forces were still resisting the Japanese on Mindanao Island, 600 miles south of Manila.

Sharp fighting was reported in progress 35 miles north of Davao, at the southern end of Mindanao, which the Japanese have been using as a base for attacks on the Dutch East Indies.

"The enemy has renewed the attack on American and Philippine troops on Batan Peninsula," Gen. MacArthur's report said.

"Japanese pressure is particularly heavy at the center of the line. The attack is supported by aircraft."

Official dispatches said Japanese patrols and landing parties were swarming along a 30-mile coastal belt in western Malaya—from the Muar river, 90 miles north of Singapore, to Batu Pahat, barely 60 miles away.

On the Malayan east coast, Japanese forces were reported to have reached the Endau area, 75 miles north of Johore Strait.

British headquarters said R.A.F. fighters machine-gunned enemy barges at the mouth of the Muar river, in the Malacca Straits settlement, where British, Australian and Indian troops were striving to stabilize the front.

Reports From Chinese

Chinese intelligence reports said 5,000 wounded Japanese were crowding the hospitals in Saigon, French Indo-China, and that urns containing the ashes of another 5,000 dead were awaiting shipment to Japan—attesting the high cost of Japanese conquest on the road to Singapore.

British military quarters acknowledged that the invaders were now only 60 miles from Singapore Island.

Front-line dispatches had previously reported Australian, British and Indian imperial troops holding positions 95 miles north of Singapore.

Amid this darkening picture, Prime Minister Churchill told parliament in London that he shared in anxiety about operations in the Pacific, but declared he had "growing confidence" in eventual vitcory there.

The prime minister, addressing the House of Commons for the first time since returning from historic conferences with President Roosevelt, announced that a three-day debate on the war situation would be held soon, and offered to call for a vote of confidence if his regime were challenged.

An official German broadcast, quoting Tokyo dispatches, asserted that 20,000 British troops encircled 70 miles north of Singapore had launched repeated attacks to cut their way out of a trap without success.

The broadcast said R.A.F. fliers were trying desperately to aid the beleaguered imperials to reach Singapore, which otherwise would have only a skeleton force of 10,000 men to defend the island fortress.

Failure of the British efforts to escape the encirclement resulted

'Dry-Sudsing' Your Home Best Cleaning Method

On some bright, airy morning, clean the downstairs of your home.

Or, plan to "shampoo" your tufted chairs or other pieces, or the rugs, so their colors will be rejuvenated. This whole process has been termed "dry-sudsing," and it's one of the best cleaning methods with the least labor. The word "dry" is relative, for the expression means a very thick suds with a minimum of water. Use this "dry-sudsing" for upholstery, tapestries, rugs, painted walls, painted furniture—in short, any cleansing where much wetting is undesirable.

The basis of a dry suds is a soap jelly made either from packaged soap, bar soap, or soap scraps. Shave or cut small, and mix in the proportion of five cups of water to one-half cup soap. Simmer until dissolved. Remove from heat and cool, when it will have the consistency of a gelatin. For use on upholstery, rag rugs, braided wool rugs, etc., use a mild white neutral soap; for washing walls or wood, use a stronger soap.

Careful Coddling

Though the silkworn does nothing but sleep and eat and spin a cocoon during the 65 days of his existence, he requires careful coddling during all of his stages, and that's where the labor difficulty comes. He has to have a nurse to feed him by hand and change his bed and keep him out of a draft. And he's very particular what he eats—tender young mulberry leaves that are just as old as he is (silkworms hatch just as the buds on the mulberry break into leaf), not damp, not hot, not bruised nor torn, but "slightly wilted" and cut up fine. Each silkworm consumes about 2,200 pounds of leaves during his life cycle, and is fed four to six times daily during his more ravenous stages. He must have fresh air during feedings, but never be in a direct current. During thunderstorms the windows must be kept closed! In Japan the heat for hatching the worms used to be applied by contact with the human body, but now simple incubators are used. It requires 30,000 silkworms to yield 12 pounds of raw silk; so there's the labor problem definitely.

First Thanksgiving

One of the most gratifying incidents in American history was the first Thanksgiving celebration, held in Massachusetts in the autumn of 1621. Massasoit, majestic chief of the Wampanoags, had been a friend of the settlers ever since the Pilgrim Fathers had disembarked from the "Mayflower" at Plymouth the preceding winter. He had protected them from the hostile Narragansetts and had helped them establish their colony. Now, after serious struggles with starvation and disease, the time had come when the colonists enjoyed food in abundance as the result of a bountiful harvest. Gov. William Bradford thereupon proclaimed a great feast of thanksgiving and to it invited Massasoit and some lesser chieftains. Clad in deerskin and feathers, the red men came and joined merrily in the festival of rejoicing . . . Good-will between the Indians and the English endured until 1674, when King Philip, Massasoit's son, figured importantly in a war against the Puritans.

To 'Frighten' Evil Spirits

It is said that the Egyptians sought protection for their ships and their crews by placing the lotus, the insignia of Isis, the phoenix, or some other sacred symbol at the prow. The Phoeniceans, Greeks and Romans had the same custom of seeking to place themselves and their boats under the protection of one or another of the deities. The Norsemen used terrifying objects to frighten evil spirits of various kinds. Great Britain favored lions, dragons and fighting warriors. Patriotic France used winged figures with upraised trumpets. American clipper ships carried a few figureheads and these were mostly emblematic of their names.

Meat for Blood Pressure

In high blood pressure, it is important to eat sufficient meat so that the blood will not lack proteins.

The best medical opinion holds that diet, so long as it is not abnormal, has nothing to do with high blood pressure.

Electrocardiograph tests made under conditions of exertion by the patient or when pain is being felt by him will reveal a heart defect undiscoverable under other conditions.

Frequently such minor changes as moving from upper to lower floor or nearer to a car line which connects with his place of work will prolong a heart patient's life for many years.

Plane Was Seven Miles off Course

Investigators Report Lack of Engine Trouble as Shown by 'Props'

Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 20 (AP)—The Transcontinental and Western Air Transport which carried Carole Lombard, 15 ferry pilots and six others to death was seven miles off its course and presumably did not have engine trouble, investigators reported today.

A T.W.A. spokesman said the luxury ship was seven miles northwest of its course. He stated the course is 25 miles wide and that T.W.A. planes are not routed over such high peaks as the 8,700 foot mountain into which the ship crashed Friday night.

A representative of the Civil Aeronautics Authority said propellers of the twin-engined craft were not feathered, as they would have been if the motors had faltered. He said that discounted a theory that the engines might have failed.

All instruments were reduced to junk, eliminating any chance of gaining a clue to the cause from them.

The investigation is being conducted by the army, the C. A. A., two representatives of the National House of Representatives committee on major air disasters, T.W.A. and local officials.

Nineteen of the 22 bodies have been brought to the garrison mortuary here. Arrival of three others was delayed overnight when a horse carrying one plunged down a mountainside, became lodged between trees and had to be destroyed.

Clark Gable, Miss Lombard's husband, broke his hotel room isolation yesterday to visit a mortuary and select a casket. He did not view her body, choosing to remember her as he last saw her a week ago.

Then he drove to the foothills and asked a recovery party to search the wreckage carefully for Miss Lombard's wedding ring and a V for victory pin she was wearing.

The booster line did the work. A short time previous they were called to the former Perry Minard place to extinguish a stubborn fire under the fireplace. Then to David Wells' home on Church street where there was a fire between partitions caused by a short circuit in an electric clock. Quick response of the firemen prevented what might have been three serious fires.

Increased Train Service Is Asked

Edelmuth and Wicks Talk Before Commission

Albany, Jan. 20 (Special)—Kingston's Mayor Milliam F. Edelmuth and State Senator Arthur H. Wicks appeared at a Public Service Commission hearing yesterday to plead for increased Kingston to Albany train service on Saturdays.

They were promised by New York Central's general attorney, W. R. Stevens of New York city, that "if the people are there to ride our trains, we'll supply them." He added that he had not expected the matter to come up at this time and hence wasn't prepared to give the railroad's official position. The case was adjourned without date and another hearing will be held unless the company agrees to put on a Saturday train at 11:05 a. m.

Senator Wicks, pointing out that "I think I know the requirements of the people of Kingston," declared that lack of the mid-day train is a "distinct disadvantage," especially with automobiles becoming so scarce. The senator revealed that he is asking the Public Service Commission to make a survey of all transit facilities in the state in view of the new limitations on travel imposed by tire rationing.

Mayor Edelmuth stated that many industries have refused to locate in Kingston because of poor rail facilities. He hinted that the railroad may be asked to supply more service, even in addition to the sought-for Saturday run.

Industrial production in the United States continues in exceptionally high volume with the backlog of orders still huge, the Department of Commerce says

New Paltz Normal In Line for New Scholastic Rating

New Paltz Normal School and all other normal schools of the state have been authorized through action of the New York State Board of Regents to confer B.Ed. degrees on all graduates completing the four-year course, it was learned today.

Final sanction of this new step forward, however, rests with the state legislature which has yet to approve the measure, but there is no indication now that it will not go through. The regents board seeking to raise the standard of elementary school teachers, took official action to establish the degree in the normal schools at a session last Thursday and Friday in New York.

New Paltz Normal School and other normal schools of the state have been teaching four-year courses since 1936 but only teachers certificates have been issued to the graduates.

"Outfitters—Crib to College"

This Newspaper is Filled With DYNAMITE!

Dynamite is a useful substance. It blasts out roads and tunnels, clears stumps, defends us against encroaching enemies.

But misuse it at your own peril! It can blow you into kingdom-come.

Your newspaper is useful, too. It brings you a daily record of what happens around you and an assortment of OPINIONS—to go with its usually accurate FACTS.

But PLEASE do not MISUSE it. From your newspaper you can learn how to divorce a wife, how to rob a bank.

You can learn the opinions of every Communist and every brutal Nazi who makes news. You are told how crooked politicians operate and how to wreck yourself in an automobile.

When you come to think of it, you realize that such news is brought you to forearm and forewarn you—so robbers, crooks and dictators CAN'T harm you. And you will admit that such news is absolutely necessary for free men who want to guard their freedom.

Note well that your newspaper contains TWO KINDS of news.

1. FACT 2. OPINION

The facts, good or bad, you cannot dodge. You may change them, as you change public officials, laws, customs, habits every day. But don't deny them or hide from them. That is dynamite.

The opinions, right or wrong, are there because every man HAS opinions. And, in AMERICA, every man has a RIGHT to his opinions. But don't accept every opinion blindly. That is dynamite.

Usually you will find OPINIONS on BOTH SIDES. Weigh them, think about them. You MUST. You are a citizen and a voter. What you and a thousand or a million others DECIDE will decide the fate of this nation. There's PLENTY of dynamite if you decide WRONGLY.

And FACT and opinion aren't merely limited to the news and editorial columns. They are both found in the advertisements also. Just the same as you need to know what all candidates for office have to offer so you can choose between them, you need to know what all merchants and manufacturers have to offer so you can decide how to spend your income to the best advantage.

Dictators do not believe the people can be trusted with all the facts and all the opinions and a free right of choice.

And the dictators are RIGHT—if they want to go on being dictators! Any American newspaper worthy of the name is dynamite—dangerous dynamite—for a would-be dictator, mighty useful dynamite for a man who wants to protect his freedom.

In Germany, Italy, Russia, Japan, a government agency decides what the people shall read and hear. Not so in America. Do your part to preserve the American way of life.

Read, each Tuesday in this space, the messages about your liberty and how America's newspapers help you defend it. Your letters of comment will be appreciated by the editor and by this committee—Newspaper Publishers Committee, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, JANUARY 20, 1942.

OPEN WATER

The steamer Adam E. Cornelius of Buffalo now holds the record for the latest passage through the Straits of Mackinac. She went through at 10:50 a. m., January 4, 1942, having cleared light from Buffalo to lay up for the winter in Lake Michigan. This is the latest passage recorded for any freighter going through the Straits.

Americans are beginning to talk learnedly about Murmansk and Archangel, about Odessa and the probabilities of Russia's getting a warm weather, year-open port after the war is over, and what Persia might have to say about this. Few of them realize that not all the traffic which touches at all the ports of Russia, Siberia and Persia put together, warm weather and cold weather both, compares in quantity and value with that carried by our Great Lakes. The locks at the Sault carry more freight than Suez and Panama combined. They bring ore and grain down from the great iron ranges and farms of the north west, they take coal and miscellaneous merchandise back up the water roads from Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio to mining and agriculture districts. The value of this shipping is enormous. That is why it is so good to have late open water. The men will now get a good vacation, many of them making for the southern states. By mid-March they will be at work again, fitting out the freighters, hoping for early thaw on the upper lakes.

CARRYING ON

It is grand that Russia and China now seem able to save themselves—with the help of supplies from us, of course. China has borne the heat and burden of several years' devastating war, and is now setting a good example to the white democracies in valor, resourcefulness and willing sacrifice. Russia, coming much later upon the scene, by her amazing performance has changed the whole face of the world war. It is grand, too, that the Dutch have shown such courage and power.

All the more reason, then, why the two great English-speaking democracies should carry their share of the load to the end, preparing as fully and fighting as hard as if they had to carry the whole weight of war alone. And "to whom much is given, of him shall much be required."

But that isn't all. It isn't merely a matter of sportsmanship. It's a matter of survival. This war is not won yet, by a long shot. And we Americans have hardly begun to fight.

HUSKY GIRLS

These women! We hardly recognize the so-called "frail sex" any more. A recent news picture shows girls working along with men building sandbag barricades around an aircraft factory at Santa Monica, Calif., and the way those girls throw the hundred-pound bags around is almost indecent.

They are so rough about it! A spectator is perfectly sure that they're busting a lot of those bags. Why, they act as if it were a schoolgirl snowball fight. Or you'd think they were playing with beanbags, except for the size of 'em. And while they're having a great time, tossing those heavy bags hither and yon, the men on the job keep at a respectful distance, scared-like. They don't want any bags of sand biffing them on the ear.

The whole business hangs together. Little by little our generation of what we used to call "he men" is learning about women. If we don't look out, the women may be grabbing this whole blooming war and running away with it.

And really, that might not be a bad idea. They'd get a quick decision.

PRE-HITLER CONQUERORS

Napoleon, with Hitler's tanks and mechanized units, might have reached Moscow in summer and avoided the disasters that the Russian winter brought. Then there would have been no Elba, no Waterloo, and Europe would have been under French rule, just as today most of it is under German.

All this you may have heard before; it is a thought that naturally occurs to commentators discussing the German advance. But an earlier conqueror, Alexander the Great, would have been still more benefited by mechanical modes of transportation.

Alexander overran all Asia Minor, Persia, a large part of Central Asia, Afghanistan, and much of India. He stopped not because he was defeated, but because his soldiers rebelled. With a few panzer divisions, Alexander could easily have gone to the Pacific Ocean.

CRUEL PRESSURE

Mrs. Sarah George of Chicago, Ill., thought she had a bright idea for her dinner party. She asked her 15 guests to weigh themselves before and after eating. A nickel for the Red Cross was requested of each guest for each pound gained.

The guests probably got a good laugh out of this unusual mode of entertainment. Eating all they could and guessing at which victuals were heaviest doubtless lent spice as well as substance to the meal.

We can think of easier ways of filling the Red Cross coffers than by having our dietary sins thus disclosed for all to see and poke fun at. Mightn't this lead to methods cruel, unusual, unconstitutional and inhospitable?

But if enough dollars are laid on the Red Cross line with enough speed, other ingenious hostesses won't have a chance.

DON'T EXPECT TOO MUCH

Every day that the German retreat in Russia continues is a day of added hope. The parallel of Hitler's retreat from Moscow and Napoleon's gains in force. Yet even if this parallel be complete, and the German army turned from a machine into a mob, there is still plenty of need for caution. Even after the Russian disaster, Napoleon lasted three years and beat his opponents in major battles. It would be pleasant but also unwise to believe that the Russians will save us the trouble of defeating Germany.

We learn, too late, that everything happening now was prophesied by somebody or other. Also that everything was pronounced impossible by somebody or other. And where does that leave us?

PREVENTING PEPTIC ULCER

When a patient is pronounced "cured" of tuberculosis, as he leavees the sanitorium he is warned that he may have to return to the sanitorium if he does not follow the sanitorium rules in regard to rest, food, and exercise.

That the precentage of cases of peptic ulcer (ulcer of the stomach and first part of the small intestine) undergoing operation has been greatly reduced in recent years is because these patients have, in hospital and home, learned how to prevent another ulcer from developing by following simple but definite rules in regard to health habits.

It is agreed that infection, shock, injury can cause peptic ulcer but the majority of cases develop because of tension, the tightness of the nervous and muscular system. Thus, while the foundation of treatment is rest, frequent feeding of food and the use of alkalies, results cannot be obtained unless the patient's mental and emotional life is given rest and relaxation. Thus Dr. Frank J. Ingelfinger, Massachusetts Memorial Hospital, in Medical Clinics of North America, has this to say:

"While at least some physical rest may be secured for every patient with peptic ulcer, the achievement of mental rest is much more difficult. Telling the patient 'you must' relax accomplishes nothing. Only after the physician has painstakingly learned his patient's emotional problems can he hope to give helpful advice." If the trouble is not due to infection, injury or other definite cause but to the tense and expectant attitude with which the patient faces the problems, much can be done by teaching a regularity of habits.

"Regularity in sleeping, in working, in bowel habits and in eating is invaluable in relieving what is known as nervous tension." This relieving of nervous tension may mean that the physician must try to meet the patient's desires insofar as they do not conflict too much with treatment.

The thought, then, regarding peptic ulcer is that a regimen—a rule of conduct—must be followed to prevent the nervous tension that is the underlying cause of so many cases.

Nurse Section Holds First Annual Luncheon

The Private Duty Nurse Section, District 11, of the New York State Nurses' Association, held the first annual luncheon meeting on January 16, in the Colonial Tea Room in Newburgh.

Interesting reports were read from representatives of the five Mid-Hudson counties. The reports showed that three more hospitals in the district have adopted the 8-hour duty system for all private duty nurses. Hospitals in the group include the Kingston and Benedictine Hospitals; the Horton Memorial Hospital in Middletown; and the Rockland State and Middletown State Hospitals.

The New York State Nurses Association is advocating that all hospitals in the state adopt the 8-hour schedule. This schedule provides adequate nursing service for many more patients, especially those unable to afford a 12-hour duty nurse. It is claimed that under the 8-hour system patients are able to buy shorter nursing service at a nominal fee.

Miss Aleta Owens of St. Luke's Hospital Training School of Newburgh, was elected secretary for 1942, while Mrs. Emma Killeen, also of St. Luke's, will continue to serve as chairman; Mrs. Arlene Malley of Horton Memorial as vice-chairman.

The next meeting will be held in Middletown on April 17.

Income Tax

Your Federal Income Tax
NO. 14
Personal Exemptions And Credit For Dependents

Domestic relations enter into the making of an income tax return. This shows itself in the matter of personal exemptions. Too many taxpayers do not understand who is legally the head of a family, or what is a dependent. As a consequence, they overpay the Government by not claiming their proper exemptions and credits. Of course, the audit of their returns discloses most of these errors, but not all of them, that are due to negligence or lack of understanding of the income-tax law and regulations.

Care is taken in drafting the instructions for filling out the forms to make them simple and easily understood. The taxpayer should study these instructions before making out his or her return.

The head of a family, as defined by the income-tax regulations, is an individual who actually supports and maintains in one household one or more individuals who are closely connected to him by blood relationship, relationship by marriage or by adoption, and whose right to exercise family control and provide for these dependent individuals is based upon some moral or legal obligation. As such, he or she is entitled to a personal exemption of $1,500.

A credit of $400 is allowed for each dependent. A dependent is one under 18 years of age, or one who is physically or mentally defective and incapable of self-support. He need not live with nor be related to the taxpayer.

If husband and wife contribute to the support of a dependent, the $400 credit may be taken by the one contributing the chief support, and it may not be divided between them. Likewise, if two members of a family contribute to the support of a dependent, the one who contributes more than one-half of the support may claim the credit.

Both the personal exemption and the credit for dependents must be prorated when the status of the taxpayer changed during the year, except where the taxpayer is eligible and elects to determine his tax at the optional rates with the use of the simplified Form 1040A.

If a taxpayer occupies the status of the head of a family solely by reason of the existence of one or more dependents for whom he would otherwise be entitled to the credit of $400, the credit of $400 in respect of one of such dependents is not allowable. For example a widower who occupies the status of a head of a family solely by reason of the fact that he is maintaining a home for two dependent children under 18 years of age is entitled to the credit of $400 allowed for one such dependent, and the credit for the other dependent is not allowable.

Anti-Trust Laws Are Seen as Impeding National Defense by Spreading Fear Among Executives

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Jan. 20—Lots of lose talk has been heard recently to the effect that the automobile industry should have curtailed its production and turned its facilities over to defense work in 1941. Those who make such comments will be interested to learn that it is impossible for any industry to curtail production unless the executives therein want to go to jail.

A specific example of how the anti-trust laws operate to impede national defense by spreading fear of punishment among the very industrial executives who are eager to be of help to their government in an emergency has just been given by the department of justice.

There's an emergency situation with respect to oil on the west coast. Fuel is needed in greater quantities than heretofore to supply a fleet at war. Tonnage for coastwise transportation is limited. Into the emergency steps the oil industry representatives on the west coast and Ralph Davies, deputy petroleum administrator. A plan is evolved to meet the emergency. But just as American oil men who tried to save a "distress gasoline" situation once before found themselves convicted in federal court by technicalities under the anti-trust laws, another group of oil men see the same wobbling sword held over their heads today in the midst of war.

Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, who seems to have as much if not more power over production than Donald Nelson wherever the anti-trust laws are involved has consented to look the other way while the law is being violated. He promises not to prosecute now but at any moment that he wants to change his mind he can bring the oil men into court and punish them for doing what they had believed was their patriotic duty. Here is an excerpt from the text of a letter dated January 15, 1942 from Mr. Arnold to Howard Marshall, chief counsel of the office of petroleum coordinator for national defense:

"Because of the sweeping character of the plan embodied in the recommendation and because the recommendation proposes to delegate to members of the industry subcommittees the power to formulate and carry out the plan, it is my view that the recommendation does not come within the procedure established by the letter that the attorney general sent to Mr. John Lord O'Brian on April 29, 1941. . . .

"In view of your representations as to the present existence of a grave emergency in the Pacific coast area and in reliance upon your statement that the petroleum coordinator for national defense regards the adoption of this plan as essential to the war effort, the department of justice is prepared to adopt and pursue the following policy in respect to this plan: The department of justice will not institute criminal or civil proceedings against members of the oil industry for acts committed in good faith within the limits of the plan set forth in the recommendation. The department of justice, however, reserves the right to examine the actual operation of this plan and proposes to exercise this right from time to time. If this examination discloses at any time that the plan in fact operates to restrain trade in violation of the anti-trust laws, the department reserves the complete freedom to institute civil proceedings to enjoin the continuing of acts or practices carried on under the plan and persisted in after notice to desist."

The foregoing is a paper assurance. It can be changed overnight with the whim of the department of justice. The oil men relied on the good faith of government officials once before in an emergency but the government officials didn't have the moral courage to go to court and testify in behalf of the oil executives, and they were convicted. In the face of such a record, other oil men are taking risks in participating in a plan which is officially termed to be outside the so-called immunity assurances given in the famous correspondence in April 1941 between the department of justice and John Lord O'Brian, chief counsel for O.P.M., which has been the basis of all similar immunities in other industries since that time.

There can be no voluntary pooling of facilities as urged by the so-called Reuther plan and certainly no voluntary curtailment of production by any industry so long as the anti-trust laws are used as a club over the heads of industry's executives. The department of justice is a department within the control of Congress, which can, if it chooses, adopt a simple amendment suspending anti-trust laws in all transactions approved by any defense agency. That would be real protection for the patriotic citizen but it might, to be sure, curtail the output of briefs and lawsuits by the anti-trust division, which is already lobbying in Congress for a bigger and better appropriation with which to continue to harass industrial executives during wartime.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—If state, county and local police in this country aren't prepared for the national emergency whether its simply convoying motorized troop movements through their respective bailwicks or handling an all-out air raid and gas attack, it won't be because they haven't already been told.

No sooner had the United States gotten into World War 2, than the Federal Bureau of Investigation jumped into print with its "FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin" with everything it had been able to learn from first-hand observation of the activities and responsibilities of police in bomb-pocked England.

Some of this information, through the national and local office of civilian defense, has already been made public, but much of it hasn't and some that hasn't is of more than passing interest.

For example, sandbagging has always been considered a pretty efficient defense precaution. The FBI points out that it is only so temporarily. Bags rot, the sand washes out, the protective wall collapses. Besides, it has been found in London that they become ideal homes for a legion of rats.

More permanent and far more satisfactory in the matter of protection are offset, brick walls, 14 inches thick, constructed so as to form a maze around the protected area. These "blast walls," as they are called, now are being used on many important police stations and other buildings in England.

Baffle board and steel or steel-faced shutters, with ventilating arrangements, are far more effective for ground floor windows and doors of public buildings that have to be used 24 hours a day(such as police stations) than any other blackout arrangements.

Every police force should have a number of trained reserves equalling at least 30 per cent of its total personnel. All public buildings in constant use should have hurricane oil lamps in case interrupted.

No police force should worry about the organization of an armed home guard. Such home guards in England are equipped with rifles which, because of their long barrels, are not capable of concealment, and thus do not fall under the "concealed weapons" laws.

In England, every person in the land has to register, is subject to challenge by police, and upon such challenge must present his identification. Such a drastic measure has not yet been considered in this country.

To save electric light during the fuel shortage, officials of Dublin, Erie, will hold meetings in the daytime.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

In August, 1923, the local Y. M. C. A. closed a successful financial drive to raise $25,000 to pay off the mortgage on the association property. The drive closed with $30,336 raised.

Charles Ramsey, long active in "Y" work here, was serving as president of the board of trustees of the association that year, and he had offered to contribute $5,000 if $20,000 was obtained in the drive.

Maurice S. Safford was serving as secretary of the "Y" in 1923.

I also recall that there was a a change in leadership in the Ulster county Democratic party in 1923, for at a meeting held on October 1, of that year, of the county committee former Mayor Roscoe Irwin was elected county chairman in place of Judge James Jenkins.

The county committee also re-elected Judge Henry E. McKenzie of Port Ewen as secretary, and William G. Merritt as treasurer. Both men, who had been active in the Democratic ranks for many years are now dead. Judge McKenzie was not only widely known as a lawyer, but also as a volunteer fireman, and had served the Hudson Valley Firemen's Association as its president. He had also been chairman on the committee on resolutions for many years. Mr. Merritt during the years he was active in Kingston affairs had served as an active member of the Democratic party; had taken a star part in many amateur minstrel shows, and was employed by the Universal Road Machinery company for many years. He had also served as city editor of the Leader for several years, and was widely known as a witty and humorous after dinner speaker.

Charles W. Lewis on October 3, 1923, filed his resignation as principal of the Kingston High School with the education board, asking that it become effective November 1, of that year. He had resigned to become principal of the high school in Englewood, N. J.

Mr. Lewis came to Kingston in 1917 to become principal of the local high school, and during the seven years he served here he became widely and favorably known.

It was on October 5, 1923, that Morris Rose of New York was installed as rabbi of Temple Emanuel on Abeel street, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. Bernard M. Kaplan.

Rabbi Rose was installed by Dr. Sidney E. Golstein of New York city.

Dr. Snyder Backs Dr. Myers in Case Now on in Court

Treatment Given Was All That Could Be Done Witness Declares For Defendant

Resumption of the malpractice action brought by Harry Castiglione against Dr. Douw S. Myers Monday afternoon brought the concluding testimony of Dr. Frederick Snyder who was called as an expert by the defense. Dr. Snyder testified that he had seen the boy at the Kingston Hospital about four days after he had fractured his arm.

While attending a patient in the children's ward he met Dr. Myers there and was told by Dr. Myers that the Castiglione case was an interesting one. Dr. Snyder said he saw the boy's arm and hand and the treatment being given was all that could be done for him. He said that Dr. Myers had used the same treatment which any other physician would have used and he said that the practice used by Dr. Myers was the accepted practice.

At that time the boy whose hand and arm became infected following a restriction of circulation after a broken bone had shut off circulation and caused a clot to form, was under treatment and Dr. Snyder said he simply looked at the arm but did not prescribe.

However, he said that he had examined the arm and found that amputation probably would have to be made later and mentioned that to Dr. Myers. He said at the time he saw the boy the time for amputation had not yet been reached.

On cross examination Dr. Snyder said that Volkman's paralysis which set in in this particular case was to be considered unusual in this kind of a fracture.

During the cross-examination numerous books were referred to by Mr. Bonomi for the plaintiff and sections were quoted as authorities on the treatment of the disease. To several of the quotations Dr. Snyder said he did not agree with the authority and later he asked to examine the book and said it was "twenty years old" and that since then science had advanced and put forth different theories. He stated that science was advancing and that frequently doctors who wrote books changed their opinions expressed in older books when science found some new thing.

One point in which he disagreed with one of the authorities was the matter of use of circular bandage. He said that a circular bandage was proper if applied in the proper way. Dr. Snyder said that the testimony was that the bandage was loose so a finger could be placed under the bandage and this he considered sufficiently loose.

In the opinion of Dr. Snyder the boy should have stayed at the hospital for observation following the reducing of the fracture. The fact that the pulse had gone but was restored after the bone was set indicated that there probably had been an injury to the artery of the arm. If so there was a possibility that complications might set in and he said the condition, which eventually did develop, came about very quickly and the patient should be closely watched. He said that Dr. Myers in requesting the boy to remain at the hospital had done right, but that the doctor had "no police power" and if a patient refuses to stay the doctor cannot make the patient remain in a hospital. His opinion was that when Dr. Myers told the parent to watch for swelling and any bluish color developing that he had given a proper warning.

Dr. Snyder said he had attended numerous similar fractures and had done much bone surgery.

Except for one short witness the testimony was concluded before court recessed for the night.

Russian Winter Is Bright Spot for Whole Allied Cause

on Nazi forces. Whether the Russians will be able to take full advantage of this is problematical, for it is a titanic task to conduct an offensive in sub-zero weather through the drifted snows of the blizzard-swept Steppes.

Spring Will Tell

We shall have to wait for spring to reveal just how much Hitler's great gamble has cost him. Reuthers, British news agency, today estimates that the Nazis have lost 2,000,000 men killed, wounded, missing and captured in the Russian campaign. This is one third the number of German losses estimated by Pravda, Communist party organ, just over a month ago. Whatever the figures actually may be, they undoubtedly are very terrible, and these men can't be immediately replaced, for they represent the cream of Hitler's armies.

Meanwhile the Russians today are reported to be squeezing tighter to cut off the salient which the Germans have been holding desperately at Mozhaisk, a little southwest of Moscow. If the Bolshevists succeed in closing this trap and annihilating the enemy, they will have wiped out the last of the strong positions which might be a grave threat against the capital in the spring. Moreover, the capture of Mozhaisk would render the fighting line fluid and assist the Reds in their effort to roll the invaders back.

One of the disconcerting developments in the Far East would seem to lie in the Japanese capture of Tavoy in Lower Burma, some 250 miles southeast of the great port of Rangoon. That gives the Japs another valuable base from which to operate against Burma proper, which in turn is the absolutely vital Allied base both for access to China and for operations against the rear of the Japanese who are making the thusfar successful drive down the Malay peninsula against Singapore.

Any invasion of Burmese territory must be doubly disconcerting in view of the fact that the British have found it necessary to place Premier U Saw of Burma under detention on the grounds that he was holding conversations with the Japanese. What U Saw has had in his head, others on his followers may have had in their heads.

The Japanese trial of strength against the powerful citadel of Singapore has drawn closer. Already the great naval base must have been rendered unsafe for warships because of the heavy Japanese bombing, which the Allies thusfar have been unprepared to counter.

It now remains to be seen whether the island of Singapore can stand a siege and thus prevent the Japs from gaining possession of the most powerful Allied base in the Far East. The Allied task is to preserve Singapore for future operations when they have the resources to assume the offensive, and to keep the enemy from moving closer to their chief objective—the Dutch East Indies with their oil and other resources.

Priceless Objects Stored

New York, Jan. 20 (AP)—It took the Metropolitan Museum of Art 15 months to find a suitable wartime repository for the most precious of its treasures, so the museum believes the enemy won't ever find it. Just to be on the safe side, however, a 24-hour guard is being kept over a steel-and-concrete house "somewhere in the country" where the museum's priceless and irreplaceable art objects are being kept for the duration.

NO TIME FOR LOVE

By WATKINS E. WRIGHT

Chapter 17

Little Slam

ALL the next day Lavinia wondered if she had made a mistake. She was alternately excited and scared. Suppose she played a terrible game even with Rod for a partner. Suppose they didn't beat Mr. and Mrs. Masters. Several times she was on the verge of going down to Rod's cottage and asking him to call the whole thing off.

But she didn't. Instead, she called the head waiter and told him that she was having a guest for dinner, and would like a table for two.

"Yes, Miss Prentiss," said the man. "I'll give you a small one near a window."

"Thank you, Charles. And I wonder if you could supply some extra-nice flowers."

"Indeed I can!"

Charles did supply the flowers. The table looked lovely. Everything seemed to point to a successful evening by the time Rod arrived. And when Lavinia glimpsed him, she knew the evening would be a success. And she thanked her stars she hadn't called the whole thing off, as she had been tempted to do. For Rod was everything a girl could ask for. He was perfect. And as he crossed the foyer to meet her, she was conscious of the many admiring eyes that were upon him.

He looked like something out of a smart magazine. He wore a white mess jacket that fitted him perfectly. His black tie was trim and gleaming above the white shirt bosom. His dark trousers seemed to accent the slimness of his hips, the flatness of his stomach. He looked taller, too—and even more tanned.

"Hello, Lavinia!" he said.

"Welcome to the Inn," said Lavinia. "How does it feel to get a glimpse of civilization?"

"It feels fine, so long as I can stick right close to you."

"Stage-fright?"

"I think so."

"Then I can sympathize."

Margot Linden came up. "Well, look who's here!" she said. "The man of mystery."

Lavinia introduced her to Rod, and said: "Mr. Elliott is dining with me."

"And," said Rod, "we'll like some bridge."

"Fine; I can arrange it."

"No, we'll do that," said Lavinia. "We want to play with the Masters pair. What you can do, though, Margot, is see that they don't get settled with some other players."

Margot laughed. "What is this—a frameup?"

"No," said Rod. "Revenge." He smiled at Lavinia. "I'm going to help Miss Prentiss put Mr. and Mrs. Masters in their place."

"A splendid idea," said Margot. "It's time someone did. It doesn't sound very nice, coming from the Inn hostess, but that couple gives me a terrible pain."

"We'll relieve it—shorty," said Rod.

"Come on," said Lavinia. "Let's go in to dinner. I'm hungry, as usual."

"Same here," said Rod.

Their entrance into the Inn's large dining room was something of a sensation. The guests fairly stared. And those who recognized Rod as the youn man of slacks and sweater—the young man who might be an escaped German prisoner—frankly whispered.

Lavinia held her head high as she led the way to the table for two.

"Everything all right, Miss Prentiss?" Charles asked.

"Perfect, Charles. And thank you so much."

"That couple over there," said Lavinia softly to Rod, "that couple with the sour faces is Mr. and Mrs. Masters. Or should I say 'are' Mr. and Mrs. Masters?"

"No time for grammer lessons, Lavinia," said Rod. "I'm too busy wondering how soon the expressions will become even sourer—if that's possible."

They had dry martinis, they had delicious cream of mushroom soup — and then on through a marvelous steak, vegetables, salad, dessert and coffee. Then they smoked cigarettes with their second cups. They waited until Mr. and Mrs. Masters had left the dining room, and then they followed. When they entered the foyer Margot Linden was talking with Mr. Masters, and he was gesticulating. Mrs. Masters was saying nothing, but looking daggers.

"Margot has probably sprung the bad news," said Lavinia.

"Come on," said Rod, "let's attack while the enemy is cornered."

"Oh, hello, Mrs. Masters!" Lavinia greeted. "And you, too, Mr. Masters. I was just hoping I'd run into you."

"Really?" said Mrs. Masters.

"Why so?" said Mr. Masters.

"I want you to meet Mr. Elliott," Lavinia said. "He's a wonderful bridge player, and would like a game."

"Where'll we find a fourth?" said Mr. and Mrs. Masters in unison.

"Miss Prentiss will play, of course," said Rod.

"But—that is, we—er—"

"I've been instructing her," said Rod, while Mr. and Mrs. Masters sought for words. "And now I want to see how good a pupil she has become."

"You mean you want to try her out on us?" said Mr. Masters.

"Exactly."

"Miss Prentiss has improved tremendously," said Margot, not knowing whether she had or not. "I think you're in for some bridge that is bridge."

There was only one thing Mr. and Mrs. Masters could do then—and that was play bridge. And they did. Lavinia, with her fingers crossed—figuratively speaking of course—went at it. With Rod for a partner, with Rod facing her, smiling, giving her silent encouragement, she settled down to play bridge as she had never played it before. She surprised herself. But she surprised Mr. and Mrs. Masters even more.

"Why couldn't you have played like this the other night," said Mr. Masters.

"Yes," said his wife, "why not?"

"I was a little rusty," said Lavinia. "I bid two spades."

"Two spades?" said Mr. Masters.

"That is what my partner said," Rod replied.

"She knows, of course that it's a demand bid, I suppose," said Mrs. Masters.

"Naturally," said Lavinia. And when Mr. and Mrs. Masters were studying their hands she deliberately winked at Rod. He winked right back.

She got up to a little slam. Mr. Masters doubled. She redoubled. She made the bid—vulnerable. And that was indeed something, considering they were playing for a twentieth. On and on. Winning, then losing. Losing, then winning.

"Now," said Rod, "I think Miss Prentiss and I would like some dancing. Do you mind?"

"Not at all," said Mrs. Masters emphatically. "I think we've lost quite enough for one evening. What I simply can't understand is why Miss Prentiss played so badly before."

"That puzzles me also," said Mr. Masters. "Will you figure the scores, Mr. Elliott? We'll compare notes."

"Gladly," said Rod.

He and Mr. Masters busied themselves with pencils and pads.

"You and Miss Prentiss win," Mr. Masters said presently.

"Yes, so it would seem," said Rod.

"How nice!" Lavinia exclaimed.

"Yes," said Mrs. Masters, isn't it?"

"By six thousand points, I make it," said Rod.

"So do I,' said Mr. Masters.

Mrs. Masters pushed back her chair. "Pay them, Mortimer," she ordered.

"Yes, my dear," said Mr. Masters. And he paid.

Lavinia and Rod thanked them and moved away. As they did so they could hear Mrs. Masters telling Mr. Masters exactly what she thought of him as a bridge player, and it was very far from being complimentary.

More Revenge

"REMEMBER, no cutting in," said Rod, as he and Lavinia entered the ballroom.

"I think you need have no fear," said Lavinia. "No doubt my reputation as a dancer has spread all over the place. The young men will shun me like smallpox."

"Never mind that sort of talk," Rod said. "I want you for myself alone. I don't want to be left a wall flower. I'd feel all hands and feet."

They moved out upon the floor, waltzing together with a sort of quiet grace, and making a strikingly good-looking couple. Rod's fair hair, and Lavinia's dark hair; Rod tall and slender, and Lavinia coming barely to his shoulders. In perfect step, enjoying themselves, becoming more and more unconscious of where they were—and remembering other dances, other resort hotels, other gay gatherings, and Lavinia remembering how she had once dreaded being one of a crowd in a ballroom, and now completely content in Roderick Elliott's arms.

On and on they danced, once around the ballroom, twice around the ballroom. Pat, the dance teacher, stood watching with a puzzled expression upon his face.

"Is that the girl you warned me against dancing with?" asked a young man at Pat's elbow.

"Why—er—yes," said Pat.

"Then you must be crazy! She's a lovely person, and she waltzes like nobody's business. Where's she been since I landed here?"

"She spends quite a bit of time out of doors—reading, I presume."

"How about an introduction?"

"Very well," said Pat, "you asked for it."

He moved out upon the floor, tapped Rod's shoulder, smiled at Lavinia. Rod frowned.

"Sorry," he said, "no cutting."

"That," said Pat, annoyed, "is for Miss Prentiss to say."

"Sorry," said Lavinia, "no cutting."

Pat flushed. "There's a new guest at the Inn, Miss Prentiss," he said. "He wishes to meet and dance with you."

"You mean he hasn't been here long enough to hear what an awful dancer I am?" said Lavinia in mock surprise.

Pat flushed even more. "When the dance is over, I'd like to present him. May I?"

"Some other time," said Rod. "Miss Prentiss and I are really enjoying a twosome." He drew Lavinia to him, and danced off with her.

Music Pupils Have 2nd Social Meeting

On Saturday afternoon, the pupils of Miss Lina M. Schmidtkonz met in the assembly hall of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church for the second social gathering of this year. All students from the youngest to the oldest attend and enjoy performing for each other. The program Saturday was in charge of Miss Jessie Kapreillian and Miss Peggy Schilling, who rehearsed and presented several interesting and attractive numbers.

Miss Schilling wrote a clever and amusing play, and coached those who took part who were: the Misses Charlotte Cooper, Beverly Bonesteel, Muriel Navy, Gloria Schantz. The name of the play was "Music Hath Charms," and all acted their roles exceedingly well.

Miss Kapreillian had prepared and rehearsed a chorus consisting of those pupils of the class who are interested in singing: the Misses Alberta Loughran, Phyllis Levey, Bianca Ertel, Jane Stewart, Beverly Bonesteel, Inez McClemens, Gloria Schantz, Charlotte Cooper, Muriel Navy, Marian Ralff, Jane Holcomb. The following numbers were sung and ably directed by Miss Kapreillian and accompanied by Miss Helen Behrens: "First Noel," "Silent Night," by Gruber; "O, Holy Night," by Adam, and "The Star Spangled Banner."

Another number was a solo, "Jesu Bambino," by Yon, sung beautifully and with feeling by Miss Kapreillian, accompanied by Miss Muriel Navy.

Wear a 'Bashlyk' When It Raids

By DOROTHY ROE
(AP) Fashion Editor

Meet the "bashlyk."

It's the last word in wartime garments, designed for the exigencies of air raid shelters by Valentina, dressmaker to New York's upper crust.

The "bashlyk," however, is a democratic costume, which the designer hopes to present in inexpensive versions. A utilitarian cover-all coat, it is equipped with pockets and gadgets to hold provisions for a night or a week-end.

The shelter coat, which compares in practicality with the now famous Churchill "siren suit," is designed for comfort and speedy dressing. You may wear it over slacks, and dress, or even pajamas and feel fully equipped.

One of its most important parts is a red wool jersey helmet, which covers the hair, so you needn't stop to comb out your permanent wave when the siren sounds. The helmet extends well down around the shoulders, for warmth as well as decorative effect.

The coat is of rough brown homespun woolens, with attached hood, which is worn over the helmet. On the upper right is a roomy pocket to hold cigarettes and chocolate. The lower pocket has room for two decks of gin rummy cards, a bottle of smelling salts, powder, lipstick, perfume and mints—all necessities in an air raid shelter, in the opinion of Valentina.

To the snug belt, which holds the wrap-around coat in place is clipped a flashlight of decorative red lucite, and under the coat flap is a secret pocket, for valuables, keys and, of course, love letters.

With the coat are worn warm red wool gloves and step-in moccasin-type shoes. The sole fastening is an oversize brass safety pin.

Valentina says she adapted the idea for the coat from the warm wool helmets and "bashlyk" greatcoats of the Russian soldiers.

ANSWER TO QUESTION ABOUT BAPTISM WAS MISUNDERSTOOD

Since I really like to have my readers show their interest by calling my attention to anything with which they disagree, I want to say thank you to those of you who have pointed out something that evidently gave an unintended impression. I refer to my answer to the question of how much one was expected to pay for a baptism.

In explaining that in Protestant churches no fee is exacted, but those who wish to do so, give the clergyman whatever they can afford, I did not intend to imply that there was a required fee in Roman Catholic churches. I was answering a reader who like myself is a Protestant. But since a score of letters have come to me from Catholics protesting the implication that a fee is asked in their church, I am very glad to quote the information received from St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York:

"It would be in violation of the doctrines of the Catholic religion to exact payment for any of the sacraments — including the rite of baptism. As in the Protesant church, it is customary for people to give an offering at the time if they can afford to do so."

Son Coming Home With Bride

Dear Mrs. Post: Within a few weeks my son is bringing home his bride, who is a stranger in this town. We would like to give them a small reception while they are here, inviting our friends and my son's younger friends. Will you tell me who stands to receive and in what order? And how can I open the front door and at the same time stand in the living-room and receive, as your book advises?

Answer: If you have no one to open the front door for you and tell the guests where to leave their wraps, you could do this yourself and then let the bride and bridegroom receive in the living-room wherever there is most space for people to stand talking with them—as his friends naturally will be inclined to do.

Even if you get someone to open the door and therefore can receive your guests just inside the door of entrance to the living-room, it would be practical to let your son and his bride receive alone rather than oblige his friends to pass by in a queue, as is unavoidable at the door.

Dear Mrs. Post: Do linens have to be laundered before they are used?

Answer: This depends upon how perfectly (or not) they already have been laundered. Linen is sometimes sold ready to use—sometimes not.

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad however to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "TABLE RULES OF IMPORTANCE." Be sure to send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post, in care of Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y. Leaflets cannot be mailed unless self-addressed envelope bears correct amount of postage.

Fight Against Cancer Gaining, Doctors Say

That many types of cancer can be cured if properly diagnosed in early stages was the optimistic note struck by obstetricians and gynecologists at the opening sessions of the Pacific Coast Society of Obstetrics and Gynecology in Pasadena, Calif.

More optimistic approach was revealed by Dr. Frank W. Lynch, for 28 years professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of California in Berkeley, when he stated that cures during the past decade have doubled from 22 to 44 per cent despite the fact that 25 per cent of cancer sufferers have neglected warning signals until too late for anything but palliative treatment.

He said no definite relationship with heredity in humans can be established definitely, yet there are undoubted cancer families in which many cases of the disease will occur inside three generations.

On the other hand, he stated, there have been cures where cancer occurred in one generation and there was no recurrence.

The university doctor pointed out that next to heart disease, cancer is the second ranking killer disease in the United States.

Dr. Lynch also made note of the fact that the present generation of laymen is cancer-minded and that in the past many deaths have been attributed to cancer when some other disease was the cause of death.

When little Elizabeth Keogh failed in her arithmetic lesson the teacher, Miss Honora Tiernan, whipped her on the legs, and the father was awarded damages and medical fees in a Carrick-on-Shannon, Eire, court.

New York, Jan. 20 (AP)—It was a one-way recovery market for rail stocks today but many leaders elsewhere failed to make the grade.

The recovery trend which seeped into the list Monday was extended moderately at the start. Gains, ranging from fractions to a point at the best, were reduced near the final hour but plus signs continued in the majority. There was an assortment of minor losses in evidence. Dealings quickened in the forenoon and dwindled after mid-day. Transfers were at the rate of about 500,000 shares.

Hopes the market had pretty well discounted a lot of bad news, brokers said, brought in fresh bidding for individual stocks. Business optimism still was offset to a certain extent by the tax spectre and scant stimulation was derived from war bulletins. The Atlantic coast submarine menace remained as a speculative barrier.

Bonds and commodities acted better.

Among shares Santa Fe posted a new top for the past year. Up most of the time were N. Y. Central, Atlantic Coast Line, Union Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, Great Northern, American Can, Woolworth, Anaconda and Phelps Dodge.

DuPont steadied after its recent retreat to new low ground for 1941-42. J. C. Penney slipped to a new low for the move. Backward were Bethlehem, Standard Oil (NJ), Glenn Martin and Union Carbide. Motors, steels, oils, rubbers and aircrafts were narrow.

Ahead occasionally in the curb were Humble Oil, American Gas, Republic Aviation, Glen Alden Coal and Brewster Aero.

Visits City Lodge

EDWARD H. KEITH

Edward H. Keith of Rochester, grand patriarch of the Grand Encampment of Odd Fellows, paid a fraternal visit to Kingston Encampment, No. 125, at the lodge rooms, Broadway and Brewster street, on Monday evening.

Mr. Keith, who has been an Odd Fellow for 40 years, gave an interesting address, outlining the birth and growth of the order.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

Mr. Keith called attention to the fact that he was the father of four boys and four girls and believed that he was qualified to speak on the subject of Junior Odd Fellowship, and his address was illustrated with a number of witty comments. He said that the junior order really formed the corner stone of Odd Fellowship and that it inculcated in the youth the spirit of friendship and fraternity.

Late Bulletins

U. S. Soldiers in Britain

An East Coast Canadian port, Jan. 20 (AP)—The arrival in Britain of 100 United States soldiers in American uniforms was announced here today.

Canadian Airmen Arrive

A British port, Jan. 20 (AP)—Thousands of Canadian airmen, one of the largest contingents to reach Britain since the start of the war, disembarked here today from a convoy which also brought further reinforcements for Canadian troops in England. It was the first troop convoy to arrive from Canada this year. Aboard its big vessels were pilots and navigators as well as ground crews, wireless operators and mechanics for the air force and foresters, mechanics, ordnance, infantry, artillery and service corps men for the ground forces.

British Attack Sicily

Rome, Jan. 20 (Official broadcast recorded by AP)—British air raiders returned to the attack on Sicily today, bombing the east coast port of Catania and the town of Vizzini 30 miles to the south, but caused no casualties and only slight damage, the Italian high command announced today. One of the raiders was reported shot down over Catania by anti-aircraft guns.

Attack on Rabaul

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 20 (AP)—A full-scale air attack on Rabaul in Australian-mandated New Britain, north of Australia, was launched today by Japanese bombers escorted by fighters, an official announcement said today. The announcement said the raiders presumably were striking from an aircraft carrier.

Experiment With Grape Seeds to Replace Oils

Among substitute items already well advanced on their commercial career are plastic shoe lace tips, the use of which could save 500,000 pounds of metals; wood and plastic hairpins are to replace those made of wire, and may prove more satisfactory.

Tough hickory wood will take the place of high-grade steel in golf club shafts and buttons will be of bone and plastic. Experiments are being made with a substitute for rubber in bowling balls. The growing of soft southern pine for newsprint will be stimulated and hardwood pulp is to be tried out. So far no practicable substitute has been found for chlorine as a bleaching element and soon paper may be expected to take on a yellowish tinge. Refrigerator doors will be made out of hard board which will also be tried out in washing machines as a substitute for scarce or unobtainable metals.

In Germany and Italy the search for substitutes is being carried to extremes. In the latter country, for example, farmers are trying to extract from grape seeds something to take the place of linseed and olive oils. In Europe the search is based on the requirements of life itself while in the United States it is to maintain a standard of living long since abandoned in Nazi-dominated regions.

Known History of Moscow Dates Back 800 Years

Moscow! That is the city to which Russians have looked most of the time through the centuries. It is the largest of all Russian cities, with a population above 4,000,000.

The known history of Moscow goes back about 800 years. There probably was a village of some sort at the same spot on the Moskva river even longer ago than that, but we do not have clear records of it.

For a time Moscow was the center of an area ruled by a prince. This prince was under the power of the Mongols. The emperor, or khan, of the Mongols was his "overlord."

As the years passed, the princes of Moscow gained more power. A much larger area of land was placed under them, but the khan was still their overlord.

At last the Muscovites (or Russians) rose in revolt against the khan. The struggle was long and hard, but in the end they won their freedom. Their ruler was called a "grand prince" until Ivan IV had himself crowned "czar." He is known in history as "Ivan the Terrible."

Daylight Saving Effective Feb. 9

Washington, Jan. 20 (AP)—President Roosevelt signed the Daylight Saving Bill today and it becomes effective at 2 a. m., on the morning of February 9, for all interstate commerce and federal government activities.

During congressional debate it was said that it was assumed the observance of daylight saving time, by moving all clocks ahead one hour, would become general throughout the nation.

The measure will become inoperative six months after the war ends, unless congress votes to terminate it before then.

Stephen Early, Presidential secretary said that it had the same objectives as the daylight saving act of the last World War—"greater efficiency in our industrial war effort."

Congressional action was necessary, Early pointed out, so that there would be a uniform daylight saving system throughout all the states.

To Select Contest Speaker For Horticultural Session

An elimination contest, to select a speaker from the Ulster-Orange county region to compete in the final contest during the Horticultural Society meeting in Kingston, will be held in the Grange hall at Goshen Friday night, January 23.

Four high schools in Ulster county with agricultural departments are eligible to send contestants to the Goshen contest. They are New Paltz, Wallkill, Marlborough and Highland. It is expected that Orange county will have several contestants for the honor.

There are two other regions in which similar contests will be held; Columbia and Dutchess counties and Greene and Albany counties.

The three speakers selected at these regional contests will be heard at the Horticultural Society banquet at the Governor Clinton Hotel, Kingston, Thursday night, January 29.

In addition to the high schools 4-H Clubs are entitled to send representatives to the elimination contest.

WOODSTOCK

Woodstock, Jan. 20—Mrs. Geyser is spending a few days in New York.

A going away party was given for Muriel Layman at the public library building Saturday evening. There were 17 guests present. Miss Layman will go to Hemstead, L. I., where she will finish the high school work in which she is engaged, and also take a business course.

Members of the Woodstock Men's Club will be entertained, with their wives, at the Kingston Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening.

Preparation, though somewhat in advance, are being made for the observance of the Lenten season by the Methodist Church here. Further details regarding this will follow.

A number of students from the Kingston High School have found it unnecessary to attend that school this week, as their averages were high enough to exempt them in the subjects.

Carson Sutters is ill at present in one of the Kingston hospitals.

Zela Lasher is reported ill at her home here.

Response to the campaign sponsored by the American Library Association and the American Red Cross for books to be sent to the men in the service, is gathering momentum. A number of books have been brought to the Woodstock library, where they will be sorted, packed and sent to a designated reception center. The following are needed: Books on science, aeronautics, automobiles, mathematics, biography and history, the best fiction of the day, and classics in fiction. Librarians throughout the country drew heavily from their own shelves for earlier needs before this drive. Many people are incribing their donations with their names and addresses. Books may be left at the library from 2 to 9 o'clock on Fridays and Saturdays, and from 2 to 6 o'clock. At all other times they may be left at the office of Civilian Defense, Miss Doughty's desk. Arrangements may be made to have books called for, if necessary, through the cooperation of the Junior Red Cross, by calling 413 or 161.

Red Cross War Fund

A substantial contribution toward the $45,000 American Red Cross War Fund to be raised by the Ulster County Committee will help keep the fighting men, healthy, happy and efficient.

Washington, Jan. 20 (AP)—Without a dissenting vote and with a minimum of debate, the House passed and sent to the Senate today legislation authorizing the Navy to undertake a $450,000,000 shore facilities development program.

Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the Naval Committee explained the program would be devoted chiefly to expansion of existing yards and docks and did not contemplate extensive new construction. He said the legislation was "absolutely essential" to "meet the war emergency."

"It showed the meticulous planning, perfectly integrated preparation and skillful execution characteristic of Hitler's moves. The men who directed that assault were undoubtedly the Nazi strategists in Tokyo."

America's Population Center—Pretty Lonely

THE CENTER of America's population is in the clump of trees to the right of the farmhouse.

By DALE BURGESS

Carlisle, Ind.—Chancy Bennett, live stock feeder on the Corbin Brothers farm three miles southeast of here, works for wages, two cows, two butchering hogs and grain for his chickens.

Besides, he and Mrs. Bennett have the distinction of living closer to the U. S. center of population—a spot in the woods southwest of their dwelling—than anyone else. They willingly would forego that pleasure.

Down On This Farm

"A bunch of people came out here and said the center of population was on this farm," Bennett explains, "and I spent half a day helping photographers and what not.

"Ended up, I had to do my chores by lantern light, and none of them fellows so much as sent me a picture."

The Bennetts came to the farm six months ago. Bennett, 47, medium-sized and with a shock of greying hair, says he's had his share of tough luck.

The population center, near a walnut tree, isn't easily reached. Three or four gates have to be opened and closed to keep live stock from straying and the approach never was meant for automobiles.

Rule-of-thumb mapwork first put the center on the Owen Collins farm across the road after the Census Bureau announced the point was two miles southeast of Carlisle. Then County Surveyor Chloral Smith made a survey and shifted it to Mrs. Emma Garrison's farm near by.

Prof. W. A. Cogshall, Indiana University astronomer, had the last say in the matter. Using navigation instruments, he pointed to the spot on the Corbin farm.

There, said Prof. Cogshall, was latitude 38 degrees, 56 minutes and 57 seconds north, longitude 87 degrees, 22 minutes, 35 seconds west—the position given for the center by the Census Bureau after a year and a half of figuring.

That is the place, the bureau said, where a population map of the United States would balance on a pin point if every inhabitant had the same weight.

134th Infantry Solved This One—But Quick

One of the outstanding characteristics displayed by today's service men is ingenuity. No situation, no matter how difficult, seems to stump them.

When the 134th Infantry gave a party at Camp Robinson, Ark., somebody neglected the all-important item of girls, an oversight which went unnoticed until the party was well under way. But Private Bob Skinner, a more than usually personable infantryman from Lincoln, Neb., proved equal to the occasion.

Commandeering a truck, he dashed over to a quartermaster outfit's dance, unerringly picked the prettiest blonde on the floor and cut in. Without loss of time the enterprising infantryman suggested a stroll in the moonlight. The girl agreed and he escorted her to the truck. Excusing himself, he returned, cut in on the second prettiest blonde and brought her out also.

When the truck was full Private Skinner roared back to the 134th's party with his giggling booty. The quartermasters haven't gotten over it yet.

house and the next building. She finally fell in a heap on the edge of the fire net.

"I hung out the window, gave myself a little shove and let go my grip. I landed on my back in the net. It was a terrible experience.

The heat became so intense that William Day, 28-year-old infantile paralysis victim, aided by crutches, could hardly stand on the floor even with his shoes on.

"My mother was barefooted," he said. "I don't see how she could stand it. But she remained cool and wrapped wet towels around our faces. The firemen finally reached us over a high ladder."

Miss Carolina Thornell, 63, whose sister Elsie, 56, was burned to death, told how she jumped from the top floor at the command of firemen.

"My sister was going to be next and I expected she would jump right after I did," Miss Thornell said. "I never saw her again."

Three-year-old Lawrence Taylor, Jr., was found dead, clasped in his mother's arms.

Eldon Taylor, 44, a contractor, saved five persons during three trips into the flame-swept building. On one trip he reached the fourth floor, stumbled over two bodies but managed to lead three survivors to safety.

Firemen experienced great difficulty in their search for the missing and in removing bodies, as the floors in the center of the building collapsed. When daylight came, however, several of the dead were taken out in brown straw baskets.

Mayor Albert T. Cole of Lynn said he would demand a state investigation to determine why fire escapes were not available.

Fun In A Blackout

By LUCRECE HUDGINS
(AP) Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON — There's a story going around about a lady who called up the Air Raid Warden and asked him what her family should do during an air raid. He said to play games, so she called up the game warden and asked what games they should play.

Which isn't as funny as it may seem. Our friends in England have been devising blackout games for two years. You just have to have something to do when you're holed in and the light is very, very poor if there is any light at all.

Favorite blackout games has been quiz or ask-me-another. You'll be smart to stock up your bomb room with a couple of quiz books. If your family is the incurably curious kind, they'll get so interested in running down the answer to "Does dry ice burn or freeze when held in the hand?" that they'll pay no attention to the all clear signal.

Such kid stuff as geography (one person names a city and the next player must name a city beginning with the last letter of the last city — and no repetitions), spelling bee, and Ghost, do wonders for the nerves, too.

Here's a novel game that came out of a London bomb shelter last winter: Everyone has a pencil and drawing tablet and must draw a picture according to the directions of a referee. It's all in the dark, you understand.

For instance, the referee says "Draw a picture of a man with a wooden leg running to meet his wife who is getting off a crowded street car with a bag full of groceries in one arm and a baby in the other." This often leads to hysteria when the lights are turned on.

For the children, prepare guessing games. In a complete blackout have them hold an ear of corn and then guess now many kernels it has. Or let them hold a potato stuck full of toothpicks and guess the number of picks. Use your imagination and you can think up a lot more. Better have prizes, too.

21 American Republics Might Make Complete Break With Axis Powers

general staffs of fighting forces of torpedo the conference by thinly-veiled threats aimed at the South American nations appeared to have backfired.

Faced with the evidence that the conference was prepared to act regardless of its attitude, the Argentine group was reported to have asked for another 24 hours to make up its mind.

This followed swiftly the disclosure that German and Italian diplomats had orally warned Brazilian Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha that should Brazil sever relations with the Axis their governments would regard it as "a most unfriendly act."

The threat, apparently part of a widespread Axis attempt to sabotage the conference, was cloked in diplomatic phraseology. An excellent source, however, declared it had aroused President Getulio Vargas of Brazil to make the grim declaration that since war had come to the western hemisphere his country could no longer be neutral.

Aranha himself left no doubt that Brazil would support a break with the Axis, asserting his government would follow a policy of "absolute cohesion with America."

Red Cross War Fund

A substantial contribution toward the $45,000 American Red Cross War Fund to be raised by the Ulster County Committee will help keep the fighting men, healthy, happy and efficient.

Maroon Plays Here Friday; Recs Hope for First Division

Newburgh Cagers And Locals Will Fight for Third

Rod Sagendorf Is Still Top Scorer in Loop With 50 Points; Old Rivalry Resumes

Third place in the DUSO Basketball League standings will be up for settlement Friday night when Newburgh High invades the municipal auditorium for its game with the Maroon and White of Kingston.

Both clubs have won three and dropped two games so far this season and a pretty even game is predicted by the experts who are slightly inclined to lean toward Kingston. It will be a resumption of the old Newburgh-Kingston rivalry which has been going on for a long time.

While Coach G. Warren Kias' basketeers were being handed a 40 to 33 beating by Monticello last Friday night, the Goldbacks were idle. The Stevedores haven't been taking it easy, however. Every night the players have been going through strenuous training programs which is the hope of the Newburgh coach to bring the squad to complete form against Kingston this week.

The season's records to date indicate Kingston as the better offensive team with 168 points in five games to Newburgh's 137. Kingston's opponents have scored 143 markers while Newburgh has limited the opposition to 127.

Both teams have tasted the sting of defeat by Middletown. The Middies edged out Kingston by 35 to 31 while Middletown dropped Newburgh 34 to 21. Here again, the edge is in favor of the Maroons, although it is still very small and may or may not mean much.

Dillon Heads Visitors

Leading the attack for Newburgh will be Johnny Dillon, one of the better ball players with the Goldbacks this season. Dillon has found the cords for 41 points this year, just nine in back of Rod Sagendorf of Kingston who has collected 50 to lead the entire league in this department.

Captain Georgie Kohler, another versatile player, is a real scoring throat. He has collected 33 points this year. Kohler can play forward or guard. When he was inserted in the recent game with Monticello, Kohler won the game for Newburgh. Larry Lahey, Antonucca, Mather, Stimae, Pastolas and Johnny Inzerra are other members of the squad.

The only possible way in which to describe the defeat of Kingston last week at the hands of Monticello, was the fact that the brilliant Rod Sagendorf was held to a mere six points. Had Sagendorf ripped off a total of 15 points or more, the Kiasmen would have won the game.

However, that's neither here nor there. Kingston must realize that Sagendorf is like any other player and can't be counted upon endlessly. Sagendorf was responsible for the other victories and in all probability will help to win many more before the year is through.

Both teams will be striking with all the fury to win this important game. Middletown and Monticelo are still clinging to the first and second place spots but a loss either way will mean a lot. That's one good reason why both Kingston and Newburgh will have a lot in common Friday night at the municipal auditorium.

Ted Schroeder's Smashing Game May Win Him 1942 Tennis Title

By RUSSELL NEWLAND
(AP) Feature Service

PALO ALTO, Calif. — The tennis fans in the stadium at Forest Hills late last summer watched young Ted Schroeder congradulate Bobby Riggs, his conqueror in the national singles semi-finals, and commented:

"It looks like Schroeder in 1942."

With Riggs and Frankie Kovacs both out of the amateur picture now, that observation seems even more plausible.

The 20-year-old Stanford University student arrived with a rush last season—eight years after he swung a racquet for the first time—in the singles phase of competition.

He lost to Riggs in that semi-final battle only after giving the champion-to-be his toughest battle, 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 8-10, 7-5.

Off that match and a fine season's showing, Ted looms as a logical successor to the title in a field which now includes Frank Parker; Don McNeill, 1940 champion, and Schroeder's doubles partner, Jack Kramer, with whom Ted won the national doubles crown in 1940 and 1941.

TED SCHROEDER
Never had a lesson

It may be, though, that Ted will be wearing a U. S. Navy uniform when time for the next national championships roll around. He has applied for a commission in the Naval Reserve and may be called early in the summer.

Schroeder, a 5 foot 10½ inch, 150-pound athlete, never had a tennis lesson. He learned from the ground up, the hard way. He's the attacking type of player, storming the net constantly for kills. He uses either the American twist or the flat service.

He won the national junior singles crown in 1939, reached the round of 16, the quarter-finals and the semi-finals respectively in the last three national senior championships and was put out as a quarter finalist in the last two American clay court tournaments.

Baseball Writers Select Hornsby for Hall of Fame

Fabulous Diamond Career of Great Player Is Honored by Choice for Coveted Award

By JUDSON BAILEY

New York, Jan. 20 (AP)—The fabulous baseball career of Rogers Hornsby, the greatest righthanded hitter of all time, carried him into the Hall of Fame today.

The "Rajah," who performed for five different clubs and managed four of them in a 23-year span in the Majors, who batted over .400 in three seasons and twice was named the most valuable player in the National League, who earned perhaps half a million dollars from baseball and lost most of it, received 182 votes out of 233 cast by baseball writers.

As a result a bronze plaque, bearing his dimple-cheeked likeness, will soon be placed alongside of baseball's other immortals —Cobb, Wagner, Ruth, Matthewson and the rest—in the Little Shrine at Cooperstown, N. Y.

Hornsby, who will be 46 in April, now is the general manager and bench pilot of Fort Worth in the Texas League. He is a jovial, grey-haired minor league executive. But in days that a vast majority of the baseball fans can still remember he was a bright comet shooting an unpredictable course across sport's horizon.

He broke into the National League with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1915 as a shortstop. Later he played every position in the infield, tried the outfield, and moved to the New York Giants, to the Boston Braves, to the Chicago Cubs, to the Cardinals again and finally to the St. Louis Browns. He managed the Cards, Braves, Cubs and Browns, reaching a salary peak of $40,000 a year with the Cubs.

He led the National League in batting for seven years, six of them in succession for the Cardinals from 1920 to 25, inclusive. He batted .401 in 1922, in 1924 reached .424, the modern record for both major leagues, and in 1925 followed up with .403.

He also led the league in 1928 with .387 for the Braves and was voted the most valuable player in 1925 with the Cards and 1929 while with the Cubs.

Hornsby had no faults on the playing field, but the magnates found some with him off the diamond.

In 1926 at the height of his career as a player and manager the Cardinals let him go because he could not be brought to salary terms by President Sam Breadon. He was traded to the New York Giants for Frank Frisch and served one season as captain under John McGraw, then was traded to Boston as Manager of the Braves. His salary, then about $36,000, was too much for the club to carry and he was passed along to the Cubs in the biggest trade in history—Chicago giving $200,000 in cash and five players.

Hornsby's passion for betting on horse races was probably his biggest stumbling block with the club owners, however. He was in hot water with Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis about this at one time or another and in 1927 was sued for $90,000 which a Cincinnati betting commissioner claimed was due him. Hornsby contended this was a gambling debt and not admissable at law and a Circuit Court jury found in his favor.

The Cubs let nim go unceremoniously in 1932 and the Browns dismissed him "for actions off the ball field" in 1937. Since then no Major League club has ever hired him, but he has managed at Baltimore and Oklahoma City in the Minors and is moving to Fort Worth this year.

ROGERS HORNSBY

Hornsby is the 14th player elected to the Hall of Fame. To enter he had to receive 75 per cent of the Baseball Writers' vote.

New York, Jan. 20 (AP)—This is the score by ballots in the election for Baseball's Hall of Fame (175 votes needed to elect): 182-Rogers Hornsby; 136 Frank Chance; 126 Rube Waddell; 113 Ed Walsh; 111 Miller Huggins; 104 Ed Delahanty; 91 Johnny Evers; 89 Wilbert Robinson; 88 Mickey Cochrane; 84 Frank Frisch; 77 Hugh Duffy; 72 Herb Pennock; 71 Clark Griffith; 68 Jimmie Collins; 66 Rabbit Maranville; 64 Hugh Jennings; 63 Mordecai Brown and Eddie Plank; 59 Iron Man McGinnity; 58 Fred Clarke; 57 Roger Bresnahan; 55 Chief Bender; 53 Ray Schalk.

45 Pie Traynor; 44 Ross Youngs; 39 Home Run Baker; 37 Dazzy Vance; 36 Bill Terry and Joe Tinker; 33 Addie Joss; 15 Nap Rucker and John Kling; 11 Babe Adams; 8 Hank Gowdy; 5 Kid Nichols; 4 Jess Brukett and Harry Heilmann; 3 Eddie Grant, Branch Rickey and Zack Wheat; 2 Donie Bush, Sam Crawford, Pepper Martin, Roger Peckinpaugh and Rhoddy Wallace.

Marksons to Bowl Kendalls Saturday At Central Alleys

Syracuse Squad Is Loaded With Ace Keglers; John Miller Leads Club With High Mark

The Syracuse Marksons will appear at the Central Recreation alleys Saturday night at 9 o'clock in a special match against Eddie Coughlin's Kendalls.

Headed by Johnny Martino, a 200 average kegler and a high ranking American Bowling Congress official, the upstate outfit will come here with an enviable record. In the 1939 state tournament in Albany, the Marksons hammered out a huge 3100 series to capture the championship. They placed fifth in the New York meet in 1940 and were in the first five at Elmira a year later.

Another standout is Tony Miller who comes through with a 210 average. Other outstanding keglers are Frankie Liss, Andy Pirano, who bowled five consecutive 700 games in league competition, and Tony Ciravola.

The Kendalls will use Harold Broskie, Gil Sampson, Hod Spaulding, Charlie Tiano and Johnny Ferraro.

Mize Optimistic Of Adjusting His Eye for New Park

New Giant Player Thinks He Can Alter System to Pull His Drives Into Right Field

Deleon Springs, Fla., Jan. 20 (AP)—Johnny Mize isn't betting on it, but now that the Polo Grounds will be his home park he thinks he may be able to adjust his batting to take advantage of that short right field.

The veteran first baseman, recently sold to the New York Giants by the Cardinals, hit 43 homers for St. Louis in 1940 but dropped to 16 last season.

"You know, when we drop into a park for three or four games, it doesn't pay to change your stance or system of nitting," explained Mize who has a winter home here.

"If we do, we are all off when we reach some other park. Playing half my games at the Polo Grounds, I may have to alter my system a bit in order to pull the ball into right field more. Those long smashes are generally caught in the Polo Grounds if they are hit to left or center unless they're line drives."

No Guest of Honor

Winnipeg, Jan. 20 (AP)—Canada's athletic elite gathered last night to honor Theo DuBois, champion rower, who was voted the dominion's outstanding athlete of 1941. That is, everyone except DuBois was present.

Finally he arrived and Toastmaster Bruce Murray apologized with "I forgot to invite the guest of honor."

Ruth Goes Hunting

New York, Jan. 20 (AP)—Babe Ruth packed his heavy clothes and guns today prior to a trip upstate and some "hunting, hiking and living in the woods." Ruth is recovering rapidly from a nervous disorder that took him to a hospital for a two-week stay earlier in the month.

Dick Chapman Wins

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 20 (AP)—Blazing over 11 holes at one-under-par, Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, defeated D. D. Carver of Miami, 8 and 7, yesterday to advance to the second round of the Miami Biltmore amateur golf tournament.

Former Amateur Champion Dick Chapman defeated Bob Odom of Coral Gables, 8 and 7. Other survivors included co-Medalist Gus Novotony, Memphis, Tenn.; Skee Rigel, Glendale, Calif.; Tom Somerville, Wilmington, Del.; and W. H. Evans, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Coach Steps Up

Wichita, Kas., Jan. 20 (AP)—Ralph Graham, assistant backfield coach at Indiana University since 1934, today stepped into a $4,000 job as athletic director at Wichita University.

Graham won nine varsity letters —three each in football, basketball and tennis—at Kansas State College and was all Big Six fullback his junior and senior years. He was graduated in 1934.

He succeeds Al Gebert, resigned.

Forty-Three Bears Report

Berkeley, Calif., Jan. 20 (AP)—Forty-three men have reported for crew at the University of California this season but, Coach Ky Ebright sadly points out, that's just a third of the normal turnout.

Only five men returned from last year's Poughkeepsie varsity. Four junior varsity members are back.

In the recent releases from the Y. M. C. A., Emil Boessneck's bowling average in the American League was reported as 157. According to Edwin Bock of the "Y" the average should have been 171.

Avoid Abrasives

Never use an abrasive cleaner on your shiny new nickel kitchen and bathroom fixtures. Instead wash them first with soap and water, then polish with whiting moistened with fine-quality household ammonia.

When a harsh abrasive is used on nickel it eventually will wear it off and after that cleaning is an ever-present task.

Whiting made into a paste with household ammonia will also remove egg stains from silver and is fine for polishing mirrors. However, with the latter it is very important to avoid getting dampness on the back.

The best way to use the paste is to coat the glass with it, then rub it off and polish with a clean dry cloth.

State Cage Teams To Play in Annual East Pro Tourney

Saratoga and Glens Falls of State Loop Have Accepted; Indians to Defend Title

Saratoga Springs, Jan. 20—Eight of the nation's leading professional basketball teams will compete at Convention Hall Friday, Saturday and Sunday, February 13, 14 and 15, for $2,500 in cash prizes in the second annual Eastern Professional tournament sponsored by a committee of local business men.

The Saratoga Indians, last year's champions, will defend their title and seek the $750 first prize. Runner-up will earn $550; third-place club $450 and the consolation loser draws down $375. Four teams eliminated the opening night will be paid $100 each. This is an increase of $700 over the 1941 tourney in which $1,800 was paid out. In that event, the Harlem Yankees took second place, the Worcester (Mass.) Steelmen third and Glens Falls Lions fourth.

"Chuck" Solodare and Larry Eckstein, both Madison Square Garden officials, are expected to referee the contests.

The teams committee, headed by James F. Carroll and Johnny Jones, local sports editor, is studying records of outstanding clubs before issuing bids to the tournament.

At the municipal auditorium last week the Dietz cagers scored a 42 to 17 victory over the Test Tubes. Fay was high scorer for the winners with 12 points. Crosby and R. Howard each had 10. G. Battle With Bears From Pittsfield on Wednesday Is Vital

Local State League Team Out of First Place by 2½ Games; Tickets Are Selling Fast

As a result of the week-end games in the New York State Pro Basketball League, the clash at the municipal auditorium Wednesday night between the Pittsfield Golden Bears and the Kingston Recreations comes right down to the point that it holds much for either club.

While the Recs are still holding down the cellar position with five wins and seven losses, they trail the pace-setting Albany Senators by just two and one-half games. Pittsfield has third place with a record of six and six.

Those week-end contests found the Senators whipping Glens Falls by 47 to 41. Meanwhile, Saratoga bounced Glens Falls 39 to 37 and Pittsfield 48 to 39. These two wins gave the Spa cagers a good chance to overhaul the Senators. However, Saratoga has lost three more games than has Albany and that may prove too much a handicap.

Battling down the homestretch in the state pro circuit, the Recs are still hopeful for first place even though that coveted position seems a little doubtful. Kingston can, however, cop second place which will prove just as important as the first two teams in each half will meet in a round robin for the circuit title.

With the Golden Bears as the opponent at the Broadway court this week local fans are thinking of seeing another scrappy battle between Al Benson, Kingston center, and "Moose" Krause, the Pittsfield pivot man. These two boys hooked up in a wild scramble at the local boards and had the fans yelling for more.

Benson won himself to the liking of local fans last week when he was one of the spearheads in the big victory over the Albany Senators. Benson's height and smooth play featured the attack. Local club officials look for the big blond to do it again Wednesday night.

As one fan said to a Freeman sports writer yesterday afternoon, "I believe the Recs will go along a lot smoother now than in the past because the present set-up is minus any individual star performer. There just a group of good players with the team now and that means that every one will be out fighting hard to keep his job and to give the people of this city some high class basketball."

And that appears to be the reason why the Recs did show better last week. Players like Hagen Anderson, Jerry Rizzo, Jim Buckley, Jack McGuirk, Benson, Cooper and Tommy Weems might make this local squad into one of the real powerhouses yet. Kingston had a lot of spirit last week in humbling Albany and that spirit is an important factor in winning important contests.

Tickets for tomorrow's game are selling at a fast rate again this week. Patrons may still secure some choice reserved seats by calling the department of recreation, 1682.

'Oyez, Oyez'

Everybody who has ever been in a United States courtroom knows that when the judge ascends the bench the court crier drones:

"Oyez, oyez, oyez, the honorable court is now in session."

But not many persons know that the crier says, "Oyez, oyez, oyez," instead of "Harken, harken, harken," because of a visit William the Conqueror made to an English court almost 900 years ago.

William had overrun England, seized the government, and placed himself at its head. Entering a courtroom, he heard the tipstaff call the assemblage to order in English. The king rebuked him, and on the spot decreed that the business of all British courts should be transacted in Norman French, his native tongue.

Afterward, however, the courts went back to Englsih, but to this day, "Oyez, oyez, oyez" still clings to court procedure wherever the English language is spoken.

An Idea That Clicked.

As many as 2,000 years ago the Chinese had mixed tooth paste from powder and water. But the first tooth paste to be made in America appeared in jars about 1849. A year later it came out in collapsible tubes. Nobody paid much attention to it then, though. But, some 50 years later, it began to be advertised in a big way.

People liked tooth paste — and they liked the way it was packed. No finger could be dipped into the air-tight tube. It was handy and economical, and it was unbreakable.

So other pastes, creams, jellies, soaps and salves began to be put up in tubes, to be squeezed out a little at a time. Some liquids and powders were deliberately made into paste so they could join the parade. Along came glues, cements, waxes, greases, printer's inks, pastry decorations and many other semi-liquids.

Partridge Cochin

The partridge Cochin was one of the hardest breeds of bantams to produce because good partridge color is hard to get. However, the past few years have brought out many fine birds.

These birds are the result of crossing the buff and black Cochin, then crossing their offspring with the large partridge Cochin fowl. By untiring efforts, they were bred down in size until they were the proper proportions for a bantam.

The partridge Cochin in the male is likened to the black-breasted red games in color but not in type. The male birds are beautiful with their red body, top color and black breast and black tail. Even though they are a little higher off the ground than our other Cochins, they have the true Cochin type in other respects.

meeting the directors met and elected the following officers:

President, Samuel Stern; executive vice president and treasurer, Charles R. O'Connor; secretary, Irvin McCausland; assistant treasurer, Samuel H. Peyer; assistant secretary, Harry L. Kirchner. Charles Turck was appointed clerk.

The Homeseekers' Savings and Loan Association of Kingston, N. Y., was founded in 1889 and is the oldest savings and loan association in Ulster county.

In his report to the board, President Samuel Stern reported a very successful year during which the Association had made 166 mortgages to borrowers for the total sum of $347,000. During the past year the Association has paid dividends to stock-holders to the amount of $61,779.11 and during the year two series were matured. These two were Series 55 and 56 totaling $186,000 of which $134,000 was "free" shares and $52,000 was for cancellation of mortgage loans.

Buys Defense Bonds

During the year the Association purchased $25,000 in Defense Bonds and President Stern said the outlook for the Association during the coming year was "bright."

Election of Charles R. O'Connor, who has served as treasurer of the Association since 1908, to the newly created office of executive vice president will place a full time officer of the Association in the office and Mr. O'Connor will devote all of his time to the business of the Association as soon as he is relieved of his present duties as deputy county clerk. In resigning his position as deputy county clerk which he has held for 14 years, Mr. O'Connor will take over the active management of the Savings and Loan Association.

Mr. O'Connor entered the employ of the Rondout National Bank in 1904 as a clerk and continued in the employ of that bank until 1921 when he resigned his position as cashier. He entered the insurance business in 1928 with Frank Dewey. It was in 1928 that he was appointed deputy county clerk, succeeding Walter H. Gill, who had been appointed to the position by County Clerk Walter G. Geroldsek when he assumed the office. Mr. Gill remained in the office but a short time and resigned because of ill health. Since then Mr. O'Connor has served as deputy county clerk and during the 14 years he has held the position he has earned a reputation among lawyers and those having business at the office as one of the most efficient deputies ever to serve in the office.

When Mr. O'Connor became cashier of the Rondout National Bank he succeeded the late ex-mayor A. Wesley Thompson as cashier.

It is understood that since it became known that Mr. O'Connor was to resign his position as deputy county clerk that there have been several applications for the position.

Rain Takes Snow

Three-quarters of an inch of rain fell in Kingston on Monday during the rain storm that broke over the city about 7 o'clock that morning. Rain fell throughout the day while the streets were enveloped in a heavy fog. The rain and milder temperatures that prevailed has spoiled ice skating in this vicinity, and the snow that had fallen earlier in the month was largely melted by the rain and fog. The lowest temperature recorded by the official city thermometer on Monday was at 4 o'clock that morning when a low of 40 degrees above zero was recorded. The highest point reached was at 5 o'clock that afternoon when 44 degrees was recorded. At 8 o'clock this morning the temperature was 42 degrees.

The United States is currently undertaking the greatest industrial expansion in its history, the Department of Commerce says.

500 Auto-Use Stamps Are Sold

Post Office Says Demand Was Heavy Monday

Kingston's post office department on Monday sold approximately 500 of the federal automobile-use stamps that auto owners must affix conspicuously to their cars commencing February 1, it was stated today at the post office department.

These stamps which were placed on sale on Monday for the first will continue to be sold at the Central and two substations of the post office until February 28. Commencing March 1 a new issue of stamps will be sold at a slightly lower cost than the February issue.

If an auto owner lays his car up for the month of February, it will not be necessary to purchase one of these new tax stamps that month, but when the auto is placed in commission March 1 or thereafter it will be necessary to obtain one of the tax stamps before the car can be used on the highways.

Japs Increase Malayan Pressure

in collapse of British resistance at several places, the radio said.

Meanwhile, Japan's far-flung assault forces struck heavily at the city of Rabaul, in Australian-mandated New Britain, north of Australia, some 3,500 miles east of Singapore and 4,000 miles southwest of Honolulu.

Official dispatches said Japanese bombers escorted by fighters, presumably operating from an aircraft carrier, attacked the city in waves at mid-day, damaging installations and military objectives.

Other Japanese bombers pounded the city and harbor at Sabang, on the island of Celebes, Dutch East Indies, in a 40-minute attack which left two killed and 40 wounded.

Sabang is on the west coast of Celebes' northern peninsula of Minahassa, where Japanese troops had already forced a landing.

Dutch fliers countered with attacks on the Japanese invaders of Sarawak, British Borneo domain ruled by the "White Rajah," Sir Charles Vyner Brooke. The attackers spread fires and caused other damage at an airdrome at Kuching, Japanese-occupied capital of Sarawak.

Complete Control Broadcast

Without confirmation elsewhere, the German radio broadcast a claim that the Japanese were in complete control of the Malay Peninsula and were massing for a climactic assault against Singapore Island.

The Berlin radio quoted Tokyo dispatches as saying that Japanese troops had seized a waterworks 20 miles north of Johore Baru, thereby cutting off Singapore from "a vital source of water supply."

Johore Baru lies at the beginning of the causeway to Singapore.

In London, a spokesman said there was no confirmation of Axis reports that Japanese landings had occurred as close as 25 miles from Singapore.

While the German claim seemed extravagant, the British conceded that Japanese infiltrations along the lower Malayan coast threatened to nullify a new stand by British defenders.

Time and again, dispatches from the front said, Japanese landing parties were wiped out before they could disappear into the jungles, but it was evident that the danger of further landings was great.

Australian sources in London declared that the "zero hour" in Singapore's defense could be expected very soon.

The United States navy sought depth bomb vengeance meanwhile against Axis submarines for an attack upon the 8,206-ton American tanker Malay, crippled by torpedo and shell blasts off the North Carolina coast early Monday.

With one man killed and four missing from a crew of 34, the Malay made port at Newport News. Three other craft had been sunk off the east coast during a five-day period.

After a 24-hour respite, Singapore was bombed again. Scores of explosive missiles caused casualties and some damage to buildings on the fortified island.

Short on air power but long on fighting spirit, Australian volunteers were reported to have beaten back two new frontal attacks by Japanese land forces in following up early successes against the invaders' tank-infantry combat teams.

Although some United States army bombers are known to have joined in the battle for the peninsula, as well as in the Netherlands East Indies struggle, an Australian in London said the inadequacy of Allied air power was adding to the gravity of the Malayan situation.

Granted Divorce

Anna Carro of Kingston has been granted an interlocutory decree of divorce from Joseph Carro, Kingston barber. Flanagan and Kaercher appeared for the plaintiff at the hearing at special term before Justice Harry E. Schirick on January 3 when the action was tried. Married at East Kingston on September 24, 1933, the plaintiff alleged statutory acts upon which to base her action for absolute divorce. By the decree the plaintiff is awarded custody of a child of the marriage and the defendant is permitted at stated times to visit the child. The court directed that the plaintiff be paid $4 weekly toward the support of the child. The decree provides that the plaintiff may remarry but forbids the defendant to again marry except with the permission of the court.

Asks Benefits for Men Thrown Out of Work

President Recommends Weekly Pay up to $24 for About 4 Million to Be Affected

Washington, Jan. 20 (AP)—President Roosevelt asked Congress today for a $300,000,000 appropriation for unemployment compensation benefits for workers temporarily thrown out of work by conversion of industrial plants to wartime uses.

He sent a letter to Speaker Rayburn recommending the appropriation and a plan for providing weekly benefits to qualified workers.

The President said that the program should be controlled by the Social Security Board and would supplement state unemployment compensation programs.

During the conversion period in plants, he said, there was bound to be distress. Present unemployment compensation laws offer "some protection" but they are not enough, Mr. Roosevelt commented.

Under the plan an estimated 4,000,000 men will receive up to $24 a week for 26 weeks during which they will be trained for employment at war production, in states where dislocated workers receive state unemployment compensation the Federal Government will contribute the difference up to $24. In states where idle workers receive no state compensation, the government will pay the whole sum.

The President approved the budget cost estimate yesterday after a conference with Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, and Harold D. Smith, Budget Director.

McNutt has estimated that cost of the program ultimately might total $450,000,000 to $600,000,000, depending on how long it took to retool factories for war gear output. He told reporters yesterday however, that "we are going to try to keep within the $300,000,000."

Home Defense

Salvaging Drive Starts

The salvaging of all scrap material, including waste paper, old rags, scrap metal and old rubber is being taken up in earnest throughout the country.

The O.P.M. has set up in each state Defense Council a salvage committee and the state organization has called upon each county Defense Council to set up similar salvage committees in the towns of the county.

Accordingly the office of the Ulster County Defense Council of which Albert Cashdollar is chairman is now sending out orders to the town defense chairmen of the county to immediately name a local salvage chairman and committee to take up this work.

The aim is to have these local committees contact as soon as possible every family and business place in their communities and urge them to save all scrap material for use in the national defense. The committee also is directed to make necessary arrangements with dealers in scrap material to call for these materials.

People who have scrap material of any kind (about the only exception to the articles that can be used are tin cans) are being urged to collect them and dispose of them at once. Such scrap material may be sold direct to dealers, or given to churches, schools or other organizations which collect scrap who in turn will dispose of it to the dealers.

Arranging Material

Instruction on arranging scrap material include the following:

Flatten out all cartons and boxes; tie them up in bundles and keep dry and clean.

Pile up old newspapers separately and tie them up in bundles.

Keep rags, metals and rubber separately—in cartons or bags if possible.

Town defense chairmen are asked to send to the office of the County Defense Council in Kingston, as soon as possible, names, addresses and telephone numbers of the chairman and members of the town salvage committees.

The Weather Bureau, Department of Commerce, is endeavoring to develop methods of long-range forecasting for defense purposes.

Post Office Uses Mules To Deliver Ton of Hay

It took $14 worth of stamps and a lot of pack mules to do the job—but Uncle Sam's postmen came to the rescue the other day out in Durango, Colo., when a feed company needed to ship a ton of hay and couldn't find any means of transportation.

Sending hay by mail certainly wouldn't be practical in ordinary times but this was a drastic situation. A customer in Silverton had to have hay to feed the cows that furnished milk for all the babies in that community. And everyone knows babies must have milk—and on schedule.

Roads and railroads were completely snowbound. Original thinking plus desperation, sent the feed-store manager to the post office to make a bargain, and get instructions about sending hay by parcel post.

He returned somewhat cheered and packed the whole ton of cow feed into small packages of a size the post office would be permitted to handle. The postmaster loaded these on pack mules and delivered them.

Broadway Crossing Elimination May Await End of War

necessary material needed for the construction work was necessary for the national defense program.

The final plans for the proposed elimination have been approved and the next step in the project was the advertising for bids for the construction of the underground pass under the railroad tracks.

Judging from all indications it is not likely that the project will be advertised for bids until the state department is assured that it will be possible to obtain the steel needed.

The elimination of the crossing has been agitated for years, and during the administration of the late Mayor Palmer Canfield the city had gone as far as purchasing properties on the south side of Broadway, adjoining the former Palen plant with the expectation that the project would be started.

Later, when it was found that the construction work was being held up for some time, the city sold the properties it had purchased at public sale. A drive-in gas station now occupies the site of the properties the city had bought.
